Madoc Council Approves First Heritage Buildings

Madoc - As a result of the council meeting on Oct. 27, Madoc is well on its way to being a community which actively cares for its past. In two separate but related decisions, councillors cast their votes in favor of preserving our history.

votes in favor of preserving our history.

The first issue to be dealt with was presented by a delegation from St. Peter's Presbyterian Church. Rev. George Beals and Ken Yarrow requested that council grant heritage-building status to four structures on the church's property the church itself, the manse and the building known as the jail. With this status, the congregation could qualify for provincial grants for 50 per cent of the cost of restoration or maintenance work up to a maximum of $3,000 annually for each building.

maximum of $3,000 annually for each building.

Council approved the designation of St. Peter's buildings as being of historical and architectural significance to the village. This is a first for Madoc, and was an easy decision for council to make because St. Peter's is an outstanding landmark and there was no question of the validity of the request. Ken Yarrow pointed out that Huntingdon Township has been giving its old churches heritage status on an ad hoc basis for some time to allow them to tap into the provincial money.

Next. council welcomed Ellen Wilson and Al Danford from the Madoc Historical Foundation, which on Sept. 29 had presented its case for the creation of a formal process to handle requests such as St. Peter's. This would be done through a Local Architectural Conservation Advisory Committee (LACAC), which must be formed by a municipal by-law. After some discussion about the possible advantages of going the ad hoc route followed by Huntingdon Township, council decided to go ahead with the LACAC. Councillor John Hall will work with the Historical Foundation to form the committee.

the Historical Foundation to form the committee. As a result of this decision, property-owners in Madoc will now be able to make application to the LACAC to have their property assessed for heritage status. The LACAC will consider the merits of the request and make recommendation to council which will have the final say in the matter.

Arena Plans Anniversary Fun

Madoc - There will be no summer hockey school at the Madoc and District Recreation magoc and District Recreation Centre in 1988, but there will be a day-long celebration of the 10th anniversary of the facility which is home to hockey, figure skating and curling groups.

At a special meeting of the arena board on Oct. 29, plans were firmed up for, anniversary activities including an all-day schedule of hockey games with teains from each league using the building. There will also be a show put on by the Figure Skating Club and a competition between the figure skaters and the hockey players tentatively called Challenge '88. All this will take place on Jan. 9, 1988.

Lack of funds is blamed for the decision to approach the idea of a summer hockey school with caution. Because of the high cost, board members were reluctant to begin the massive renovation of the arena which would be necessary to keep ice frozen during warm weather. It would take upwards of $74,000 to install dehumidifiers, exterior insulation and steel siding, perhaps a heavier-duty compressor, and ceiling insulation (which is needed in any case, along with dehumidifiers, because of corrosion of the steel beams).

No grant money is available at this time from the province to help with any of the project except the ceiling insulation.

The board will make applica-tion for funds for the summer hockey school, and hope to be considered favorably some-time in the future, perhaps in time for the 1989 summer

Daryl Kramp was at the meeting on behalf of a group which wanted to purchase 500 hours of summer ice time, and the board told him that it could have a commitment at this the board told him that it could make no commitment at this time to have the ice available. If funds can be obtained, either from the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation or the Ministry of Energy, then the board would feel more comfortable about taking the risk to develop a summer ice capability for the arena.

Public Meeting on Free Trade

Madoc The Hastings County Federation of Agriculture is again giving the voters of this area a chance to hold their elected representatives accountable for the direction of government in this country.

On Dec. 10, there will be a public meeting on free trade at the Kiwanis Centre in Madoc. Ken Yarrow, president of the Federation and organizer of the meeting, said he has tentatively lined up MP Bill Vankoughnet and MP Jack Ellis, and he's hoping to have others as well.

Yarrow says the format will be similar to the all-candidates meeting he_arranged in September, with each politician or expert being given three to five minutes to make an opening statement. Then they will have to field questions from the floor.

Yarrow hopes the meeting will put the politicians on the spot so they'll quit waffing around on the free trade issue. So far we've only had broad statements, he said, and it's time to get down to specifics so Cont'd on page 2

Parade organizer Carol Ann Kramp said there is still time for individuals, groups or businesses to enter their floats, bands, clowns, etc. Entries can be stored at Bert Jones' or Pigden's the night before the parade, and Madoc firemen will help set up on parade morning.

The parade is expected to last about 1 1/2 hours. Afterwards Santa will be at the Kiwanis Centre to meet the youngsters and hand out some goodies.

Gert Kramp is once again collecting donations in Madoc to help with the cost of the treats and the bands which have to be hired. Carol Ann said the Santa Claus Parade is being held a week earlier this year to avoid a conflict with the Grey Cup game. # Caught in a Love Affair

If you have watched the news lately, you have probably heard about the man in Florida who shot his broker and then himself. This man had lost several hundred thousand dollars in the recent stock market crash. Evidently he felt angry and desperate as a result of his loss result of his loss. Recently, many have learned just how unstable wealth really is. Those who trusted in their store of monetary riches received a rude reminder that even financial resources can be unstable and untrustworthy.

¡We all have an inner desire to support and care for ourselves and our families. As a matter of fact, the Bible says that if we ignore this responsibility then we are worse than an infidel. So, money in itself is not evil, but the love of money is. It is the root of all evil.

Making menes the second of the Making money turn into more money is not evil. That is good stewardship as far as God is concerned. But when money becomes the end of everything, when it becomes an all-consuming desire, then our love for money has replaced our love consuming desire, then our love for money has replaced our love for God.

In western culture especially, many are having love affairs with their money. Those love affairs turned sour for many during the past few weeks. Since the bottom fell out, many have run, seeking security. Long line-ups to purchase Canada Savings Bonds show that many are scrambling to find a safe-and secure area to invest their money, one that will not fail them.

I wish yet another lesson might be learned from this tragedy. I would hope that a materialistic society would realize that material things, money included, cannot buy happiness. Nor can they be thought to be enough to get us through this world or the next. If only people would realize what the Bible says. We should love the Lord our God with all our hearts, souls, minds and strength.

In the end it is God who gives the power to gain wealth and it is He who can allow it to be taken away. We are only His managers. We will need to give an account of our investments when we stand before God, whether they were for our interests or God's interests. Until that account is given I would rather be found loving God than loving my money.

St. Peter's Presbyterian Church along with the manse, the garage and a building known as the jail are Madoc's first heritage buildings. The limestone church with the 120 ft. clock tower was completed in 1884 to replace a wooden structure which was destroyed by fire in 1873. The manse was unharmed by the blaze as it was originally built in 1884 of stone. The church was built for a total cost of $18,000. The steeple of $1. Peter's is an outstanding landmark in Madoc because of the church's location on top of a hill.

could not bring himself to support certain aspets of the agreement.

Meech Lake makes only Quebec a distinct society. The distinctness is undefined, leaving it open to every interpretation that future governments of Quebec may wish to put on it.

Mr. Vankoughnet said he is very disappointed that the Premiers such as David Peterson did not get a commitment from Quebec to rescind Bill 101, which calls for French only in Quebec. The Meech Lake Accord gives further moral and political support to Bill 101 and entrenches it as the only official language in Quebec. This is not acceptable and goes against the spirit of the agreement.

More Deer to be Taken This Year

A dramatic increase in the number of deer in Ontario allowed the Ministry of Natur-al Resources to issue valida-tion tags to 61,548 hunters to hunt antlerless deer this year. That represents an increase of more than 10,000 over last year.

The names were selected in a random draw from more than 83,000 applicants.

The number of applications for 1987 tags increased by 10 per cent over 1986, and 74 per cent of all hunters applying for the tags were successful in the 1987. Almost one-third of the 121,345 hunters last year were successful in harvesting a deer and the rate is expected to rise this year.

"The provincial deer population has doubled in size, to more than 200,000 animals, since the antierless deer validation tag program was introduced in 1980 to help reduce the harvest of antierless animals," Natural Resources Minister Vincent Kerrio said. "Relatively mild winters have also contributed to the increased deer population."

At the same time the number of validation tags available has more than quadrupled, from 16,723 in 1980 to more, than

71,000 this year. Not all the available 1967 tags were issued this year because there was not enough demand for them in some areas, particularly in wildlife management units designated for archery designated

The Ministry of Education's resource document Education About AIDS, which will assist in the mandatory teaching of AIDS education beginning this fall in Ontario schools, is now being distributed to elementary and secondary school tary and secondary school teachers, Education Minister Chris Ward and Health Minister Elinor Caplan announced

The factual way in which information is presented in Education About AIDS, is one of the most effective ways we have of supporting school boards and teachers in educat-ing our children about the threat of AIDS," said Ward. Education About AIDS was released in June in draft form and circulated widely through-out the educational communi-ty. More than 80 groups and individuals responded to the individuals responded to the draft, including organizations representing the two publicly-funded school systems, teachers, parents, and health organizations.

The five-part resource document includes both facts about AIDS, as well as suggested teaching strategies. AIDS education will be mandatory for students in grades seven or eight and for those secondary school students taking the compulsory physical and compulsory physical health education credit.

Parents or guardians of students, or students who are 18 years of age or older, who believe any component of a physical or health education program is in conflict with their religious beliefs, may apply in writing to the school principal for an exemption from such a component and it will be granted.

A French-language version of the document is scheduled to be released later this fall.

I asked.

On Tuesday, Oct 24, the principal of Madoc Public School, Mr. John Murphy, celebrated his 55th birthday in a very special manner with the whole school, staff and students alike, taking part in the celebration.

What made this birthday so different was the fact that Mr. Murphy was not aware of any preparations concerning the party involving the staff and students.

Mrs. Faulkner, our music teacher, prepared three songs to each of the classes to sing to Mr. Murphy and every teacher had their students write a note and draw a picture as a card.

All of these papers were put in a very special album to be presented as one of the two very special gifts.

On Tuesday morning, at 9:40, everyone in the school gathered quietly in the gymna-

I remember well the day the man with the scar came to our house. It was a dark, stormy night and the shore was being swamped with the ocean's water. Every two seconds the flash of the lighthouse struck across the front of our dismal house.

The sudden rap on the door

The sudden rap on the door attracted everyone's attention to the entry way. Father, since he was the man of the house, strutted across the floor and slowly opened the door. As he did, a flash of lightening struck and showed us the face of our late visitor. It was a sailor standing drenched in a rain hat and coat with an enormous Father thoughtfully greeted and showed him in. Mother fixed cocoa and porridge for the strange man while he sat by the fire wrapped in blankets, while his clothes dried.

He told father his name was Jack Dwyer and that he and his fellow crewmates were swept off the deck in the storm and that he was washed up on the rocks down at the edge of the sea. "Nearly drowned." he said

"Nearly drowned," he said as he sniffled. Father offered him a bed for the night and he graciously accepted.

In the morning the sun bril-liantly rose from its nest. When I walked into the parlour I say that our late visitor, Jack, was dislodging boards from a sium waiting for Mr. Murphy, who, unsuspecting, was told to go to the gym. As he entered, we sang "Happy Birthday".

Out student council president, Kari Kramp, the M.C., gave an interesting commentary throughout the ceremonies.

As part of the entertainment, we all sang "Special, Magic Penny" and "Standing Penny" and "Standing Together".

After the singing, Sarah Rose, a student in grade 2, gave the presents, a scrapbook and a Hastings County Board of Education sweater.

There was also a lovely large cake, which Mr. Murphy divided into over 400 pieces for everyone in the school to taste. I am sure the staff, students and, of course, Mr. Murphy, will remember this very special birthday for a long, long time.

you've caught me. I was hoping to get out of here before anyone was up."

"What are you looking for?"

"Have a seat. You see long ago my great-grandfather buried his very valuable trea-sure in the floor of this house to saure in the floor of this house to hide it from pirates. From what I hear, he was killed before he could return for it. He was killed, so I have returned for it."

After the story I couldn't wait to help dig. We had dug for about 10 minutes, then "thud" we had hit something solid; Quickly we uncovered the object. It was a chest. We carefully, well, mostly Jack, lifted it out of the hole. In a minute Jack had a jack knife out picking the lock; click, it was open.

was open.

When he lifted it, sparkling gold coins appeared. As I marvelled at all the wealth, Jack was busy filling up a sack full of gold and presented it to me.

I asked what it was for and he said for keeping it safe and for the room and board and for the family. As he walked out the door with the chest he said, "Ahoy", then disappeared over the ridge and was never seen again.

Could you live comfortably, or even half as well as our Indian, Eskimo and early-Indian, Eskimo and early Canadian ancestors, without the natural resources which they found available here? Consider only how you could manage to keep warm in winted.

We need fuel in abundance to merely survive in our north-temperate climate in winter

non-renewable oil,

natural gas, coal and uranium supply a major and increasing portion of our heating energy. There is speculation that hydrogen will become the heat-ing fuel of the future, however our non-renewable energy resources will most likely be needed in abundance to produce it.

So, now we are apparently proposing to free-trade these non-renewable energy resources without considering how survive here in winter.

It is unlikely that our generation will encounter the prob-lem, but what about our child-ren and grandchildren? They will not all be able to move to Florida or Arizona to keep warm in winter and they could well start to run short of some of our non-renewable fuel sources even without free trade, and probably ten times sooner with free trade

When some people of one Canadian province could say about those of another, "Let them freeze in the dark," is it not more likely that another country would have similar sentiments?

We should conserve our natural non-renewable energy resources and not use them as bait for other trade-offs. This birthright should remain as part of the heritage of our descendants for as long as possible. WS Ward, P. Eng.

Dear Editor: It's interesting when you ask about Free Trade. Last week. about Free Trade. Last week, a woman asked a local store owner whether Free Trade would affect the business. "I feel a little frustrated about Free Trade." said the woman. "It is good for us? and what can we do about it if Mulroney continues to say it is a Federal

I feel the same about Free Trade as I do Canada's New Defense White Paper. Is there Defense White Paper. Is there no way for Canadian citizens to see transcripts - complete - either in the newspapers or mailed out individually. Mail them with the baby bonus cheques, telephone, hydro or land tax bills. this would allow Canadians an opinion about the legislation.

When Canadians, a highly educated, articulate and modern people, knew about the issue of Capital punishment, the debate was lively, continu-ous and thought-provoking. Jack Ellis mailed his consti-tuents a questionnaire dealing with numerous issues. When MPs voted, Canadians felt like they had been involved and they had been involved and helped to shape the decision. That has not happened with Free Trade, which David Peterson opposed and was elected in by a landslide. It has not happened with the Defense White Paper, which changes Canada's image from the peacekeepers of the world to aggressors in the arms race; where previously Canada just supplied the parts.

And, in regard to the White Paper, the government will say that Public Hearings were held. Where in Ottawa?, Toronto?, Vancouver? It sure Toronto?, Vancouver? It sure wasn't in Hastings County. And I'll bet the government position was well represented and paid well ($800 plus per week travel, accommodations) to attend to attend.

You and I will receive no money to attend. Wou and I will receive no money to attend, we can't leave our jobs and hence have no say in decisions that definitely were not detailed during the election when I had my once every four years' vote. I understand from an editorial' in the Tweed News that Runciman, MPP for Leeds Grenville, has introduced a private members bill which calls for citizens to vote through referendum on major changes in government policy.

We know through the national media that Canadians lost on the 'shacks & shingles' deal, and it seems jobs will be affected from tampering with the 'autonack'

the 'autopack'.
Please send me a full copy of the Free Trade agreement and the Defense White Paper and constitutional amendments, educational truancy legislation, crown corporation/ privatization legislation, back to work legislation - drug bill amendments, etc. Give me six months to a year to discuss, debate and study the issue so I can form an opinion. Then let me vote on the issues that will affect me, my children and the planet for years to come.

Premier Peterson said this initiative will put before the public the consequences of the draft Canada-U.S. free trade agreement and will explain the reasons for Ontario's objec-tions to the proposed pact.

Mr. Peterson also announced nat: a number of industry that 'a number of industry impact studies, previously prepared by the Ministry of Industry, Trade and Technology, will be reviewed and reassessed in the light of the proposed free trade deal. They will be published and released as soon as possible. In addition, Mr. Peterson said he will shortly be holding a public information session with senior management and labour representatives of the auto industry to discuss the implications of the proposed free trade agreement on the Auto Pact.

Mr. Peterson said the deal does-not meet four of the six conditions necessary for Ontario's approval which he set out during the recent election campaign.

The six conditions are: protection of the Auto Pact, an effective dispute-settlement mechanism protection of agri-mechanism, protection of agri-culture, continued screening of culture, continued screening of foreign investment, protection of cultural industries, and the maintenance of regional subsidy programs.

Mr. Peterson said the most serious concern is the new bi-national tribunal set up as a final arbiter of trade disputes between the two countries. He said the tribunal does not provide a sufficient mechan-ism to avoid the protectionist trade laws of the U.S. Congress

Congress.

Mr. Peterson said the Cabinet Sub-Committee will give Ontario citizens the oppor-tunity to put forward their views of the kind of country we'll have in the next five, 10 or 20 years from now, as a result of the proposed free trade deal.

Tax shelter investments benefit highest tax bracket

When the roof caves in on a tax shelter, many novice inves-tors may be trapped in the financial debris.

Only experienced investors who can afford to lose money should consider entering the tax shelter market, says Ermanno Pascutto, Director of the Ontario Commission (OSC) Securities

Tax shelter investments "Tax sneiter investments are designed specifically for people in the highest tax brack-et," says Pascutto. "These individuals can realize the maximum level of tax benefits from such investments and can afford the loss if the underlying investment goes

Unfortunately, the plans sometimes attract people with moderate incomes who cannot take full advantage of the intended tax benefits; nor can they afford to lose the money they invest.

Pascutto cites an example Pascutto cites an example involving a $10,000.00 investment in a motion picture. For an investor facing the highest taxation rate, the movie taxation rate, the movie venture offers a $5,000.00 tax

If the motion picture is not successful, it may not produce any revenue, but even if the film is worthless, our investor would still save $5,000.00 in taxes and the most he stands to lose is the remaining $5,000.00," the director explains. "On the other hand, if a person in a lower tax if a person in a lower tax bracket got involved, he may only be able to save $2,000.00 in taxes, leaving a potential total loss of $8,000.00 if the film

Novice investors who are Novice investors who are often least able to afford such losses are also the most likely to get involved in the wrong type of investment through misunderstandings about tax benefits and risk factors. Confusion can also cause problems when the initial cost of an investment does not represent the total amount of represent the total amount of each investor's commitment, Pascutto says.

For example, a promoter might sell 10 shares in an apartment building worth $500,000.00. Each of these.

"partnership interset;" would 'partnership interests' would be valued at $50,000,00, but if the promoter obtained a $50,000.00, but if the promoter obtained a $250,000.00 mortgage, the required initial investments would only be $25,000.00 each.

OThere's nothing wrong with this transaction provided investors are aware they are ultimately responsible for up to twice the initial investment," Pascutto explains. "This could become a concern if the building was overpriced to start with or dropped in value to a point at which it didn't cover the mortgage. Investors would then have to cover the shortfall. That's not something you want to discover at the last minute."

A number of people involved in this sort of real estate deal lost much of their life savings a few years ago when property values plummeted in various parts of Canada.

parts of Canada.
Investors buying into a property like the lictitious apartment building should also be aware they are unlikely to enjoy regular revenue from the venture. Income from apartment | rentals would be needed to service the mortgage.

Tax shelter investments are Tax shelter investments are sold throughout the year, but the market is busiest from October to December when personal tax planning is at a peak. Along with real estate and motion picture ventures, the type of investment can vary from shares in resource companies to interests in medi-cal research partnerships.

"Before investing in this market, you should take the time to carefully assess its full financial impact, the value of the underlying investment and whether there are other investments which are more appro-priate, like paying off a mort-gage or other loan," Pascutto says. "It's also wise to get advice from trusted accounting, investment and legal experts."

If in spite of all precautions, an investor gets caught in a deal involving questionable practices, the problem should be reported to OSC investigators at 416-597-0681.

Those dam beavers

By Marion Strebig For the Federation of Ontario Naturalists

Recently I came on an aspen as big around as a man's thigh which had been felled and cut which had been felled and cut up by beavers. This cutting was done on a small man-made spit in Lake Ontario about a quarter of a mile from the mouth of the Humber River. The Credit, the Humber and the Rouge rivers in Metropolitan Toronto all have resident beaver populations. Urban beavers live somewhat differently from their northern counterparts. There

Urban beavers live somewhat differently from their northern counterparts. There are at least two populations in the Humber River, both of which are bank dwellers. As a rule they do not dam or build a lodge. Occasionally they have delusions of grandeur and attempt to fell a 60-foot poplar. One poplar this size stood for a season suspended on a 4-inch thick spike the beavers. Historically the pursuit of beaver pelts pushed trade routes westward to Lake Superior and James Bay. The Hudson's Bay Company established the northern fur trade in 1670 mainly because of the supply of beaver. So important was the beaver to the economic growth of Canada that it has become a national emblem.

By the early 1800's intensive trapping had temporarily exterminated the beaver in many places in Ontario. In fact, when the beavers were exterminated in the area between Trout Lake and Georgian Bay, their dams caved in, taking out two miles of beaver ponds which had made the route just passable for the huge cances carrying furs

By the turn of this century the trade in beaver had declined, largely because of the dwindling beaver popula-tion. Now beaver populations are again common throughout much of Ontario due to improved trapping laws and reintroduction schemes. In reintroduction schemes. Tofu or soybean curd is just being discovered by Canadians. For most of us it's a new food; for many it's a very intriguing one. Tofu has been used extensively in the Orient

As an added bonus, tofu is inexpensive, generally costing between $0.99 and $1.59 per pound, with no wastage.

You can incorporate tofu into many of your favorite recipes. # 'Stop playing Sleeping Beauty'

Dear Editor:

I met Josie three years ago in Ottawa. She was a speaker at the Ontario peace conference there, along with Marian Dewar. Josie's words were very penetrating and she made me feel uncomfortable. My first reaction was to blame her for that by saying things like "she cornes on too strong" and "she's too radical," Bearing in mind Sister Rosalie Bertell's words that they only medicinal approach to a "dying planet is fundamental honesty. I finally accepted the reach season for my discomfort. She challenged me to reach beyond my present level of commitment and I didn't like it.

Last year as I travelled to the peace conference in North Bay I was "curious" to see if Josie would be there. She was and she awed me with the strength of her beliefs. Of the strength of her benefits. Of the International Women's Confer-ence in Nairobi in 1985, she writes "the North American women stopped complaining of jet lag when they realized that their African sisters had walked for eight days to meet

I was happy to see Josie at the peace conference in London this year and was looking forward to hearing about her winter trip to Nicaragua. I heard instead about her more recent experiences at the World Congress of Women held in Moscow this past June "Towards the year 2000 without nuclear weapons for peace, equality and justice" with 3000 women from 154 countries. She talked about a woman in Mozambique who asked if we are going to stand by while their children die of hunger. She related the words of a woman from Zimbabwe who said that Western feminists have defined feminism to defend their white Western

One of Josie's comments stays with me throughout my business hours, housework peacework, family time and relaxation hours. "Unless we women in the West stop playing Sleeping Beauty, we will have betrayed not only our sisters but the planet itself." I believe her.

Flood control financing a problem

Madoc - Controlling spring flooding on Deer Creek, which runs through Madoc, will take more than eight years and well over $2 million, according to a draft report of the Moira River Conservation Authority (MRCA). The document was presented to Madoc council at their regular meeting on Oct.

A delegation from the MRCA attended the meeting to get feedback and guidance from council before they wrote a mai report. Reeve Tom Deline the opportunity to voice frustration at the MRCA, sometimes apparently without regard for the financial burden the requirements place on a municipality. Deline wanted to know if the Deer Creek flood-control work, for example, is compulsory, and if Creek flood-control work, to example, is compulsory, and if so, what financial help Madoc is eligible to receive. He stressed that when the bureau-cracy at the MRCA hands down a new standard for erosion or flood-control, they had better be prepared to come up with a source of funding.

In the case of work on Deer Creek, including a new dam on St. Lawrence Street W., there are 85 per cent grapts available from the Ministry of Natural Resources. The MRCA submits details of the projects needing funds in Madoc, and they are ranked along with all the other projects in Ontario according to priority. There is no guarantee money will be forthcoming. In the meantime, forthcoming. In the meantime, there might be another disastr-ous flood in Madoc such as the one several years ago.

Council decided that the work on the Seymour Street section of the creek is the most urgent, including dyking and rechanneling the water to drop the flood plain by one metre (three feet). The report also says the bridge on Seymour must be replaced, because, although it's structurally sound, it's in a poor state of repair.

The MRCA estimates the cost of all the work necessary to reduce the risk from Deer Creek to be $1.8 million. The amount jumps to $2.25 million when the cost of replacing the bridge is figured in. These are 1806 dollars.

Mike Genereaux, of Madoc, brought this 160-pound, nine-point buck in to the Madoc Meat Market on Nov. 6 to be weighed. He got it in Murphy's Corners.

Fair receipts up 25 per cent

by Jim Kennedy

by Jim Kenaedy

Madoc - The weather was good for the Madoc Agricultural Fair held Sept. 25, 26 and 27, and we were able to make full use of our outdoor entertainment. Friday night we had our heavy and light horse draws with 34 teams participating. Saturday at 2 p.m., we had our opening ceremonies with honoured guests and Fair Queen Toni McEathron. Roy Rollins received the long time service award. The Country Pride band played Saturday and Sunday afternoon. Saturday night we had a mammoth-sized demolition derby with 50 cars competing.

Our gate receipts were up approximately 25 percent over last year: $20.001 this year and $16.473 last year. We had 201 exhibitors who won a total of $12,179.31 in prize money.

Next year we are planning on restoring our poultry show, adding a petting zoo and building another track for horses. It is also our intention to run five or six motocross races on a sanctioned circuit.

"We are going to have one hell of a byelection, and we are going to beat the Tories," said Bob Rae, leader of the NDP and leader of the Official Opposition, at a dinner meeting held at the Havelock arena on Friday evening, November 6. The question arises whether Mulroney "can give my country away to Ronald Reagan," said Rae. He said it was an error to use the words "free trade" to describe the issue. Why call it "free" when it really isn't, questioned Rae. He remarked that the words "don't necessarily conjure anything more than a general feeling of more freedom."

"Free" is a good word, but it isn't a "Free Trade deal," said Rae. He described it as "a

To the Editor:

To the Editor:

Two days after Halloween night I became part of a conversation I found very disturbing. The discussion was over whether or not children from the country should go to the village for trick or treating. Frankly, I was shocked to find out some people in town feel country children should not come to town Halloween night, and, in fact, they resent having to give them treats. Perhaps I'm over-reacting a rernaps i m over-reacting a touch here, but my children happen to be "country kids" and where they are concerned I become quite defensive.

First of all, if we took/our children to our close neighbours, they would have a grand total of three houses to visit.

total of three houses to visit.
We happen to live on a deadend road. If we had to continue around the countryside we would probably be driving for quite some time to make going out worthwhile

Second, I feel my children have just as much right to participate in the village events as the "town kids." I believe we in the surrounding countryside are just as much a part of the Madoc community as the people in town.

as the people in town.

After all, when someone asks me where I live I say "Madoc." not "Madoc Township." My eldest son belongs to Madoc Minor Hockey, the Madoc Figure Skating Club, he played baseball in Madoc, he took part in the swimming program in Madoc and last year he attended, and we participated in, the Madoc Nursery School (I could list more). In School (I could list more). In the future we will continue to be involved in these activities

Finally. I find it sad to think that anyone would begrudge a that anyone would begrudge a child, country or town, a tigat on ONE night during an entire year. I find this to be a very selfish attitude. Although we live near the end of a dead-end road, I buy Halloween treats every year and a child from town would certainly be welcomed. In fact, whether they were from the country or town would not even enter my mind.

I am sure the people in town who have this attitude are a minority. But for those who do, may I suggest next Halloween place a sign on your door saying. "Country Kids hot Welcoune." We will be more Welcome." We will be in than happy to pass you by terimitely one of the characteristics of this season: desertion.

Lately I have been listening to the tales of wives and children.

The common story goes like this, "My husband/dad is going hunting and will be gone for days/weeks." This got me to start thinking about desertion. I know each wife and child knows that their husband/dad is eventually coming home, but what would it be like if someone did not return?

be like if someone did not return?
If a hunter were to become lost and did not return to his family, the whole community would be mourning. Dad would be gone. The family would experience loneliness and desertion. Although we do not wish this tragedy on anyone, many people are faced daily with these feelings but due to different circumstances. Homes are broken up each day and children are left with only one parent. We graduate from school and our close friends move away. We move into a retirement home and our family seldom visits. We look for help and there is no one around. The feeling of desertion is upon us.

How to please your feathered friends this winter

By Marion Strebig For the Federation of Ontario Naturalists

Ontario Notario Notari

of a favourite food.

For stocking the feeder the following mixture is recommended: 25% hemp, 25% millet, 25% sunflower seeds, 10% buckwheat, 10% peanut hearts and 5% grit. This last, either coarse white sand or fine gravel, is essential for the bird's digestive process. This mixture will please most of the common winter birds like house finches, blue jays, mourning doves, chickadees, nuthatches and cardinals. Notice that the recommended mixture does not contain corn which often makes up the bulk of commercial mixes. In my experience, where there is corn there are starlings. The fewer of these clever bullies you have around a winter feeder the better.

As well as a platform feeder, I usually hang several cylindrical feeders. One of these feeders is a sunflower feeder without a catch tray underneath. The flocks of goldfinches and pine siskins, which arrive after the first heavy snowfall, knock out three seeds for every one they eat. This overflow is enough for most squirrels. Occasionally, though, a real troublemaker comes along, like the squirrel which spent a long time studying the feeder from every angle before deciding to leap right down on the protective cone. After toboganning down the metal several times and hitting the ground with a thump, he discovered a rough eage which allowed him to cling upside down long enough to grasp the feeder and dump seeds onto the ground. A little smoothing and a coat of oil on the metal put an end to his game.

My other cylindrical feeder is specially designed for small med like niger. The visits of small birds like redpolls and siskins will reward you for this extra indulgence.

Since the diet of many birds like chickadees and downy woodpeckers normally includes many insects, they relish a source of fat, especially in severe weather. Make sure it is beef fat NOT pork. Fat can be melted down and then formed into balls containing little treats like raisins, uncooked (not instant) oatmeal, and bits of nut. The best way to hang the fat is in some kind of mesh container, for instance, a nylon mesh bag that once contained onions. That way the large birds like the jays cannot make off with the whole lot before the small birds get any.

Once you are hooked on the backyard comings and goings, you may wish to set up a safe feeding place for the ground feeders like the mourning dove, the cardinal and the white-throated sparrow. A pile of evergreen boughs will provide a safe haven where you may scatter millet and sof common wild flowers like mullein and evening primrose. Make sure the pile is near thick shrubs or evergreens so that the birds have an escape route if the neighbouring cat is on the prowl.

Remember that once you have started a successful feeding station you have committed yourself until the hard your condemn some of your visitors to death. At first they will come to your feeder in two's and three's and only for brief visits. But as soon as the storms come they will flock to the feeder several times a day. Tiny mites like the chickadee and red-breasted nuthatch can withstand severe cold as long as their little furnaces are kept well stoked.

Regular visitors like chickadees and pine siskins are remarkably trusting of human beings. The first time a chickadee lights on your shoulder or perches on the side of your hand in order to take a seed from your palm, you will feel like St. Francis of Assisi. Thoreau in Walden speaks of his experience with a sparrow "I once had a sparrow light on my shoulder for a moment while I was hoeing in a village garden and I felt more distinguished by the circumstance than I should have been by any epaulets I could have worn."

Two members of the Stirling and District Lioness Club, Secretary Shirley Wilson and Vice-President Cheryl Lake, dropped into Whitley's Arabian Farm to leave off a cheque for the Quinte Therapeutic Riding Association, last Saturday morning. Accepting the cheque for the amount of $200 is Joshua Davis, of Belleville, (on the horse) while QUINTRA Vice-President Hill Vandervoort (right) looks on.

The Royal Bee Electric Reel

Royal Barton started thinking about an electric reel 14 years ago, after his father had a stroke and lost the use of an arm. To have that happen to the person who had taught him the pleasures of fishing, made Barton realize the effects a handicap could have one apprisman's life.

To be able to cast or retrieve

To be able to cast or retrieve To be able to cast or retrieve a lure, to experience the thrill of a big bass try to take your rig away from you, these pleasures of life would now be denied his father. He was determined to do something bout it. So, after tremendous personal expense and years of research and development, Barton came up with a small, compact unit he called "The Royal Bee".

Here's how it works:

The Royal Bee is a system of gears tied into the gears of the existing spool; a motor switch in the back drives the gears attached to the triggering system. When all the gearing of the electrical system is disengaged, you can cast normally. When you push the button for retrieve, two gears are engaged. Then the trigger engaged. Then the trigger touches the switch that tight-ens the drive belt, and slipping is prevented. You cannot hit the switch until the gears are properly engaged.

The system works on a six volt battery. If you have a boat with a six volt battery system, the reel can work from that source of power. There is a small connector that plugs into the reel so you can easily connect more than one reel to the same battery.

A reel equipped with the Royal Bee system can be used in a conventional mode when in a conventional mode when you choose to do so. An obvious benefit to any fisherman using the reel is the ability to cast and retrieve with one hand. There is the added benefit of faster retrieve, more casts per minute and less fatigue in a day of fishing. You also have one-handed control of the line and lure. All benefits aside, however, the system is fun to use. It adds another dimension to fishing.

If you are interested in more information on the Royal Bee information on the Royal Bee and accessories, contact Bruce Enterprises, 700 Bruham Avenue, Pembroke, Ontario, K8A 5A4 or phone 613-735-2174. It makes a great Xmas gift.

Note:

NIGHTMARE

by Jennifer Althoff
Grade 5
One night Mandi and I were walking through the woods,
when we saw a mansion we had never seen before. Worst of all, it was glowing!

"W-w-w-what is that?"
asked Mandi.

I don't know," I replied. As Mandi calmed down, she finally said, "Shall we go investigate?" "Alright," I said.

"Alright," I said.
As we approached the mansion, we saw a sign that said "Welcome to Nightmare Manor (Enter at Your Own Risk!). Mandi gulped.
"Let's go inside." I said.
When we walked inside we heard a faint scream. Mandi jumped into my arms.
I said. "Get down ding done."

dong." "Okay," said Mandi breathing heavily.

"Let's go!" I said. "You lead
the way."

When Mandi stood in front of me she suddenly shrieked, How discusting!"
"What is it?" I asked.

It was a lady with red hair, a pale face and a purple dress. She had died with two holes in

"It looks like she has been bitten by a vampire!" said Mandi

"Ut-oh," I said. Right in front of us stood a vampire. He said, "I vant to suck your

Well you can't," said Mandi

"Well you can't," said Mandi in a piggy voice.
"Ah ha" said the vampire.
He walked past us and bit another lady in the neck.
We ran and ran through the mansion. We opened a door and we saw the vampire!

Yippe!" The ladies who were dead were alive again!
They lived happily in the mansion and we walked home and never came back. THE HAUNTED HOUSE

by Dawn Chard
Grade 5
One day when I was at my friends house. I was dared to sleep over night in the haunted house in the forest. The three requirements of the dare were: I had to stay alone; sleep in one of the scary room. Bring something back to prove I was there:

I was there:
The next day I had to go to that haunted house. So I packed my stuff. I brought:
my pillow, my stuffed bear, hair spray and most of all my dad's gun! My friends walked me to the door and ran off. The very first thing I noticed was the air. The air smelled sickening. I heard someone calling my name. The gate was slamming so hard that it broke. Cob webs were all over the place. I was really glad I had my pillow because every time I heard something I would bite it. The first three hours I heard foot steps coming to the door. Then a wolf was howling and someone was screaming from outside! Thank goodness it was almost morning. I went to sleep.

The next day it was their dare. I dared them to sleep over night on the weekend. They said no but they were dared!

Contiden and it was their dared.

KEYS, KEYS, KEYS I yelled, "Rachel, the key out there might fit this lock!" Rachel ran and got the key, I stuck the key in the lock and a big door opened in the back of my closet.

by Kelly Henderson
Grade 5
One day when I opened the old box in the attic I found thousands and thousands of keys. My great, great, great grandfather had an unusual nobby. He made molds and then made them into real keys.
I sat there and pused the keys around. All of a sudden this very fancy, old, shiney key struck my eye. I picked it up.
All of these questions were roaming around in my head,
was this key to a secret room?
Was it to a treasure chest? Or was it just one of grandpa's hobby keys.
All of a sudden I picked up the phone and dialed 473-4358, I didn't know who I was calling.
I thought it was Rachel but I didn't know. A voice came on the phone and said, "Haloow,
This is Steve Bancroft." I knew that voice anywhere, it was Rachel's little brother. Jimmy Meraw.
I said, "Hi, is Rachel

Meraw. I said, "Hi, is Rachel there?" (I finally knew who I was calling.) Then Rachel came on the phone and I told her about the old, strange key. She said, "Hang on, I'll be right over."

We went to my room to get my coat out of the closet and when I took the coat off the hanger a shiney thing struck my eye, so I went back into the closet and there was a lock with opals all around it.

The Royal Canadian Legion History

Prior to World War I, the armed services in Canada were represented by regimen-tal associations, scattered tal associations, scattered units of various types and one Dominion organization: The Army and Navy Veterans of Canada. Membership to these groups was limited and mostly restricted to large units. groups was limited and mostly restricted to large urban centres. Their activities were largely devoted to discussion of service, national functions and assisting needy comrades in distress. in distress.

Canada was totally unprepared for the holocaust of the Great War: it was also unprepared for rehabilitation problems which arose when peace finally came. Some idea of the immensity of the problem is indicated by the fact that more than 600,000 men had seen require. service; nearly 60,000 were killed in action; 138,000 were wounded, and some 130,000 men were discharged medicalunfit as a result of their ervice. What the government service suffered from most was lack of experience when dealing with these problems. Veterans, on whose advice it depended, lacked organization. The obvious result was confusion and a lack of facilito handle the multitude of problems. The government had to start from scratch with regard to war pension admi-nistration. The world-economic dilemma made matters worse.

An unemployed veteran, returning to his homeland, noticed wealth and prosperity around him which had arisen during the war as a result of increased industrialization and specialization, drastically stepped up to meet the demands of the war machine. demands of the war machine.
The veteran returned to Canada, his heart full of glory, but his belly empty. Little was being accomplished on his behalf and he was bitter.
Under such complicated conditions some fourteen or fifteen national veterans' armue sarrage up between 1917.

groups sprang up between 1917 and 1925. They had no united voice. no united effort. Attempts were made to co-operate their activities but each group's objectives seemed different from the next and thus they appeared to work at cross purposes Unity was the only hope that-the veterans had in order that their needs be fulfilled. In 1925, the Dominion Veterans Alliance came into exis-tence, spurred by the plea of one man in particular - Field Marshal Earl Haig of Bemer-Marshal Earl Haig of Bemersyde, Commander in Chief of the British Armies. Having had experience with the growing pains of the British Legion, he was invited as guest speaker at a convention of all veterans' organizations in Ottawa. In November 1825, all organizations met in Winnipeg for a "Unity Conference". The inspiration and dedication of men such as Earl Haig and General Sir Richard Turner bore fruit. The Legion was born and by July 1825 it was self-supporting.

Considerable time had been spent on the preparation of a Constitution and it is interesting to note that it was so well prepared that few changes have been found necessary to this day. syde, Commander in Chief of the British Armies, Having

Legion Progress and Growth

From its inception, Legion quite naturally concerned itself primarily with concerned itself primarily with the battle for adequate pensions and other benefits for war veterans and the dependents of those who had lost their lives as the result of war. Beneficial changes were effected but the Depression of the 1930s created a whole host of new problems. The Legion was continuously involved both in local endeavours and nation-in local endeavours and national undertakings in efforts to improve the desperate conditions of veterans in most of Canada. A significant development in this period was the introduction of the War Veterans Allowance Act in 1930. This benefitted those prematurely aged by their war experiences disability pensions.

With the advent of World War II, the Legion was revitalized by the demands made upon it and the influx of new members. The effort during and immediately after the war was prodigious. Canadian was prodigious. The University Training Program provided an opportunity for thousands of returning veterans to gain professional status, and we believe had a marked impact on all aspects of Canadian life in the ensuing years. With the adoption of the Veterans Charter, the Legion's task was far from complete, however. In the succeeding years improved benefits were sought, especially in regard to

The main mandate of the Legion is to offer assistance to veterans and their families. However, the Marmora Branch also donates a substantial amount of money back into the community each year.

This year during Legion Week, a color party of eight memebers opened a worship service at St. Paul's Anglican Chruch on Sept. 20. They were joined by 20 or more members, in addition to the congregation. Rev. The other organization within Branch 237 is the Ladies Auxiliary. They are 55 strong and work right along side the men. According to Zone Commander Lucille Bedore, they too make substantial yearly contributions to the community.

In September of 1946, the Ladies Auxiliary was formed in Marmora. The following February (1947) the group of

Of the 16 original members, three are still actively involved with the auxiliary.
Auxiliary members include wives, daughters, granddaughters and nieces of the veterans from both World Wars. The auxiliary raises its funds through monthly public dances, as well as their catering service.
Their next open dance will be held on Nov. 21 beginning at 9 p.m. Come out and dance to "Just Plain Country". Cost is $7 per couple and a lunch will be served.

How the war changed Canada

War, of course, is a horrible thing - countries are destroyed, along with the people who live in them. No one knows this better than war veterans, and so no one was happier when the wars ended than the thousands of Canadians who fought in them.

But what kind of country did they return home to? It is one of the ironies of the Second World War that the men and women who came home found that they had transformed their country, even though they had been away from it. Consider some of the things that had happened while they Consider some of the things that had happened while they were serving overseas. Canada had gone to war as a producer of raw materials and agricultural goods, and she ended it as one of the world's great manufacturing nations. She had started the war as a largely rural country and by its end, urbanization had made large strides. Her cities had mushroomed.

Other things had happened then Japan over-ran the rubber plantations of Asia, Canada promised to produce synthetic rubber. By war's end, 10 plants were in operation and Canadians were turning out 15 kinds of rubber. It was the same kind of story for the vehicle manufacturing industry and so many other things.

For Canada's veterans, the return home must have made them feel a bit like Rip Van Winkle did after his long sleep: It was still the same country, but it had been transformed.

but it had been transformed.
But even if there was some apprehension about the kind of country they would be returning home to, it couldn't hide the joy they felt when the war in Europe ended. Canadians celebrated from coast to coast and in Europe, but perhaps one soldier from British Columbia's Westminster Regiment put it best. He was shaving on VE-Day when he happened to look at his image in the mirror. "Boy," he exclaimed, "am I glad to see you."

The changes that the veterans returned home to didn't stop them - or Canadians from remembering the country's 114,000 war dead.

Because of a misunderstanding about what we were trying to do. Madoc Legion Branch 363 decided not to assist me in compiling information for these pages. Nevertheless I was able to learn a great deal about the men, and women of Madoc Legion through research. What impressed me the most was the pride these people have in themselves and in what they stand for courage, sacrifice and love of freedom.

I regret that I was unable to get directly acquainted with Madoc Legion and its members. However I will be among those at the Cenotaph on Nov. II who feel moved to tears by the enormity of what it means when young men go to war and when older men remember.

A land where it would seem government has too long sought the destruction of that esprit de corps that made our volunteer army of two world wars second to none in the world." Pigden went on to say, "Colonel Sherry has been warned of the possibility of courtmarshal for failing to discard the beret. As a soldier his ability to protest is severely limited. He pointed out however that the Regimental Association and friends of the unit are not so encumbered and although time is short (he has two weeks to comply), he does not underestimate the value of political action by those groups."

Madoc - Some men, it is said, are hardened by war, but others are mellowed by the awful experience and they cherish life and loved ones all the more. Such a man is Albert (Pat) Willman, of Madoc, who served in The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment during World War II. Pat says he's the only Hasty Pee who's still a member of the Madoc Legion.

Pat was 25 years old and the father of three children when he enlisted with the Hasty Pees in 1939. He had been a member of the militia for three years.

On Sept. 10, 1939, Canada declared war on Germany, and the volunteer soldiers of The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment began their training in Picton. While stationed there, Pat learned to be a drummer and to give first aid.

In December the Regiment sailed to Greenoch, Scotland, then moved on to Aldershot, England where training inten-sified. The men were given aptitude tests and assigned roles to play at the scene of combat.

Commat.

Pat says it takes seven men working behind the scenes on the supply line to keep one man on the firing line. There have to be cooks, stretcher-bearers, truck drivers and people to get ammunition, water and clothes for the fighting men. Pat ended up driving one of the gasoline trucks that supplied the cook houses.

In 1940 The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was shipped to France, but France fell to the Germans shortly thereafter, and the Canadians retreated back to England without seeing much action.

The soldiers stayed in England until 1943 when they left for Sicily and got a heavy dose of combat. Pat tells of standing in a trench on the front line during one of his delivery runs when a shell landed among the men taking shelter there. No one was hit directly, but the shrapnel took out a Canadian soldier who was about 25 feet away. Pat says he was temporarily blinded and deafened by the force of the hit. The shock of seeing his comrades killed in such a sudden and brutal way is still vividly with him. "I had to pray to the good Lord," he said, "that nothing would habden to me."

said, "that nothing would happen to me.",
Pat was injured when he was struck by one of the Canadiandriven trucks. His right leg was hurt badly enough to qualify him for a pension at the end of the war.
Pat received the Efficiency Service medal for his war record.

His wife Dorothy, who was left at horne during the war with three small children, says, "It was hell for the wives. You got awfully lonely waiting for word." Sometimes she had to wait weeks and weeks to hear from her husband, and she knows now that he spared her the details of his actual situation in Italy. She had to keep her family going on 579 a month, and this forced her to go to Toronto to work in a factory to make ends meet.

Pat says there are times Pat says there are times when war is necessary, but it should only be a last resort. "If you knew your house was burning down, you'd try to save it, right? Well, the Germans were running over everything and somebody had to stop them."

The key to an effective fighting force, he believes, is to ing force, he believes, is to have an all-volunteer military. If you're forced to serve by being drafted, he says you don't have the same commit-ment to the war effort.

After he returned home from the war in August 1944, he became involved in the creation of The Royal Canadian tion of The Royal canadian Legion, and he tells proudly of having his name on the origi-nal charter of Madoc Legion Branch 363. Pat Willman will be among Pat Willman will be among those brave men in uniform at the Madoc Cenotaph on Nov. 11. He has trouble getting around now, but you can be sure he'll be thinking of his buddies who lost their lives a long way from home and of all they endured together.

Stirling Legion Branch 228 history

by Ruth Tierney, P.R.O.
During the month of November, I think it is appropriate to write a few thoughts about Remembrance Day, what it means, and a short resume of the origin of the Stirring Legion Branch. 228.

Branch.228.

Just 'after World War I, veterans decided to form a club they called, "The British Empire Service League". It was later to become known as The Reval Capacian Legica. The Royal Canadian Legion. Not until the early thirties did Stirling servicemen form Branch 228.

Branch 228.

A few of the charter members were: George Heasman, Jack Butler, Dr. W. Pedley, Ernie Dainard and the first Padre Rev. A.S. McConnell. These names will live in perpetuity because of the integrity and loyalty shown to their comrades who had fallen in such faraway places as Ypres and the Battle of the Boyne.

The Branch was inactive

during the 39/45 conflict but the Poppy fund was kept alive by the trustees; namely Harry Francis, C.R. Bastedo and Padre McConnell. After the surrender a committee, headed by Rev. A.M. Laverty, re-established the branch and a renewal of the charter was granted December 27th, 19/46.

granted December 27th, 1946.
The first President of the fledgling branch was Comrade Russell West. He inaugurated persons to office and initiated 46 new members. Before the present structure was expected. 46 new memoers, before the present structure was erected meetings were held in the Masonic Hall, that was equipped with a wood stove. One of the first official motions made 'and seconded was to purchase a half cord of wood to provide some heat.
It wasn't until 1957, that a lot was purchased for the construction of their own building. When the place was completed, it was dedicated at a District Drumhead Service.

By 1964, the membership had reached a total of 66 persons. A cement-block addition was built on the south side of the hall to provide a kitchen. By 1972, another expansion was necessary. This was undertaken with Weiger De Jong in charge of the volunteer work parties.

Fund-raising activities were high on the agenda and the President at that time, Comrade Andy Brown and his Executive Council, managed to raise enough cash to complete the inside of the building and purchase furniture. The work was completed on September 19th, 1973.

The Royal Canadian 30 Legion Service Bureau

Canada's war veterans are slowly disappearing. The aver-age age of Second World War veterans is 66 years, and the lists of deceased veterans that appear in Legion Magazine every month are getting every month are getting longer.

What does that mean for The Royal Canadian Legion Service Bureau, which was founded after the First World War to help veterans get the disability pensions provided by the Federal Government? Does it mean that the Service Bureau, which is funded in part by donations made during the annual Poppy Campaign, will no longer be needed?

part by donations made during the annual Poppy Campaign, will no longer be needed? The Legion says that's not the case. The number of veter-ans may be shrinking, but they still number more than 650,000 and the bureau will be needed for a long time simply to look after their increasing needs and the needs of their dependents.

But the bureau's service officers, who provide all of their services at no charge to their services at no charge to the applicant, are seeing numerous younger clients these days - including some who are only in their 20's. They are Canada's peace-time servicemen, and even though they have not gone to war they are still eligible for disability pensions for injuries suffered while on duty. The service officers help them find their way through the maze of government legislation and will also represent them before the appropriate government board or tribunal.

And, even though it is peacetime, injuries suffered while on military duty can be pientiful in recent years, as many as 23 servicemen have been killed in accidents in one year, and many more have been injured.

Those accidents mean that will be needed long after the war veterans have gone. In fact, the bureau will be one of the major legacies Cansada's veterans will leave for their peacetime counterparts.

Memories of a past war - George Heasman

by John Lowry
On Monday, December 18th,
1986, George Heasman of 187'
Church Street, Stirling, celebrated his 92nd birthday,
George, a member of Stirling's Royal Canadian Legion Branch 228, is one of the Village's six living First World War veterans.

War veterans.
In an interview with the Stirling News-Argus, Mr. Heasman recalled some of his many memories of his service in war-torn Europe during what was once called "The Great War" of 1914-1918.

George was born, the oldest son in a family of nine child-ren, in the English county of Kent in 1894. When George was twelve years old, his father decided to pack up the family and moved to Canada. The Heasmans set sail for the Dominion in 1994, and upon landing, moved to the Stirling area where George's father eventually hoped to get a farm of his ewn. of his own. He worked as a farm hand

He worked as a farm hand for approximately three years before a local businessman, William Mathers, lent him the money to purchase a farm in the Oak Hills.

Following in the footsteps of their father, George and his younger brother, Fred, went out west just prior to the outbreak of the First World War to work as farmhands.

In January 1916, George decided to return home to Stirling and sign up with his home battalion, the 155th.

There was a lot of pressure on young men to sign up and fight for "King and Country" at that time, and George remembers being pestered by recruiting officers while travelling back to Stirling.

"They were right after me and were quite persistent. I just could not make them believe that I was going home to sign up," he recalled. George finally convinced them of his sincerity by offering to sign up," he recalled. George finally convinced them of his sincerity by offering to sign up then and there, if they would give him two weeks leave and pay his passage home to visit his family.

Returning to Stirling. George enlisted at the local recruiting office- located in what was then the town hall (52 Mill Street now houses Stirling Feed and Seeds). The recruits were boarded in the village and their initial training consisted of drill in the town office's large hall and occasional route marches according to George.

While undergoing training, George applied for a position in the signals section but was instead slated for the machine gun company. Shortly thereafter George and many of the

With their basic training completed, the recruits were then shipped to England on a large ocean liner, George said. "We were pretty lucky. They marched us on last so instead of going below into the hold of the ship with the rest of the

Interestingly, as the convoy of troopships made its way across the Atlantic, George recalls being posted up in the bow of the ship with the machine gun and acting as a lookout. "They told us to keep a lookout for submarine periscopes and that if we spotted

On arrival in England, those men that had specialized in anything were separated and sent to different camps, George said. The training was stepped up and could be quite arduous at times. "They put it to us hard and some of the guys didn't like it. They had some unkind things to say to the sergeants," he commented, but added that the tough training, which included exercises such as running up a steep hill with a fully-loaded pack, prepared them for the conditions they would find in battle. It was shortly after the Canadians took. Vimy Ridge that George was transferred to France where he joined the

However, the war was never far off and one of the never far off and one of the first experiences George had upon reaching the frontline was acting as a member of a burial party for two young men, who happened to be from the Quinte area, who had just been killed.

For the soldiers, life in the For the soldiers, life in the trenches often meant slogging it out in less-than-perfect conditions and enduring numerous discomforts. A gun crew consisted of four members and the men took turns standing guard. Two stood guard, he explained, while the other two grabbed some sleep in a "funkhole" (a funkhole was a small dugout cut into the side of the trench with just enough room for two

"You had to fight the lice more than the Germans. We used to call it reading our shirts," he recalled with a smile.

Life at the "front" wasn't without its hazards as Heasman found out on several man found out on several occasions.

Shortly after the Canadian Corps took Vimy Ridge, George's unit took over the positions vacated by the Germans. While stationed on the ridge, George was working his way along a trench at night twisted his knee.

The twisted knee "got me a three-month holiday, you might say." George commented, but once the knee healed he was anxious to return to action and asked to be sent back to the front. "I wasn't like those 'leadswingers'," he said. "Once I was fit enough to fight again, it was my duty to go back to my unit." (Leadswingers were men who aggravated their wound to avoid being sent back to the frontline)

Interestingly, while he was recuperating at a convalescent camp behind the lines, George decided to make an unofficial trip. His younger brother, Fred, was serving with a signals section in the 3rd Cana-dian Division at the time and as that unit was stationed not too far away, George decided to go for a visit.

"There really wasn't much for us to do during the day so I figured that I wouldn't be

Hitching a ride with a supply wagon, Heasman found his

Fred was out on manouvers Fred was out on manouvers and George had to wait for most of the day before he returned

When he did, the two sat down and had a good long chat over a shared dinner of rations. As it was getting dark, George hitched a ride back with a returning truck and was lucky enough to get a ride right to his base camp. "And I wasn't even missed," he added.

It was during the final offensives of the war, when the Allies were driving the Germans back across France

when he stepped in a hole and twisted his knee.

The twisted knee "got me a three-month holiday, you might say." George the 4th Machine Gun Company came under a German artil-lery barrage. Having just recently taken that section of trenches from the enemy, the George and his number two man, a chap called Bob, were sitting on the edge of the gun pit watching to see if the Germans would counter-attack. "I told Bob that you better get down, as there was quite a bit of artillery coming over. I'll look over for five to ten minutes then you can look ten minutes then you can look over for a few minutes," he recalled. "He put up a bit of a fuss, but finally sat down. It wasn't too long after that, that I got hit."

A piece of shrapnel struck George in the neck below his right ear and lodged next to his spine. As he fell wounded, remembers George remembers his number two man grabbing him and saying, "You'd think I'd stuck a hog" (referring to the amount of blood George was losing.)

While not proving lethal, the wound earned George a "Blighty", as a wound requiring hospitalization in England was often referred to. "It was a miracle that I lived," he said.

"I thought I was done as I was falling down (after being hit)." Sent "'down the line", George was transferred to a hospital in England where he spent several months recuper-

Wartime sacrifices

As we watch the Remembrance Day ceremonies each year, our attention focuses on war veterans. They, after all, are the ones who went to war and suffered through the horrors of combat. But they weren't the only Canadians to suffer, for war has no respect for age or sex.

suffer, for war has no respect for age or sex.

The horror that Canadians faced at home was of a different kind, the kind that made people watch their front gate and hope that the telegraph boy wouldn't show up with a telegram from the Department of National Defence-reporting that a husband or son had been killed.

During the Second World War, more than 40,000 such telegrams arrived in Canadian homes. Twenty years earlier, during the First World War, more than 60,000 of these telegrams were sent.

But concerns and worries about loved ones weren't the only hardships faced by the people who stayed at home when Canada went to war. You probaby haven't heard of rationing, but it was very well known during the war.

Canada, had a small population when'the Second World War started, about half of what it is today, and most of our factories were busy producing the arms and ammunition and ships our Armed Forces needed. That meant there But concerns and worries the other goods you are acces-tomed to.

Because goods were scarce, the Government decided that the only way to ensure that people got their fair share was to ration them. Canadians were given coupons that allowed them to buy a certain amount of butter, gasoline and food each week. Without the coupons, prices would have risen drastically, but rationing also meant that many of the things that had been taken for granted, like Sunday drives and large meals, were no longer possible. There were more serious inconveniences too, because there could be too, because there could be problems getting to work, or to a doctor's appointment.

When the war finally ended

When the war finally ended in 1945, there were huge celebrations in Toronto, Winnipeg and other cities. Why were people so happy? Mainly, of course, because peace meant no more long casuality lists and no more sad telegrams. But Canadians were also But Canadians were also happy because they knew that their lives could once more return to normal, and that the sacrifices of the war years were behind them.

The poppies that Canadians wear every year during The Poppy Campaign are one way of showing that these sacrifices haven't been forgotten.

If we all strive conscientiously to fulfill the great purposes represented In the Flanders Poppy, we will have done much towards holding high the torch which has been passed to us from the failing hands of our comrades-at arms who rest beneath the poppies of Flanders Field.

A history of Havelock-Belmont Legion Branch 389

By Anna Kriedemann

NOTE: Appreciation is extended at this time for permission to use previous information compiled by Mrs. Pat Deline, which was presented by Comrade Bill Cartwright, at Branch 38% 40th Anniversary in 1986. Comrade Cartwright is a Past President and Service Officer, and Mrs. Deline is the Branch Public Relations' Officer.

It was the fall of 1945. The war was over, and the boys were coming home. They came, the soldiers, the nurses, and other military personnel. They would never be the same

They would never be the same again.

It was a familiar sight in Havelock, and in other villages across the country, to see groups of men meeting on the street to share their stories. Those that met at the corner of George and Oak Streets in the village, on their way to or from the post office, shared their experiences, and that was the beginning of Havelock-Belmont Legion Branch 389.

First Official Meeting

The first official meeting took place in the Town Hall Council Chambers, and on January 28, 1946 an election of officers took place. The first president was Bill Forsyth, 1st Vice-President was Earl Hoffman; 2nd Vice-President Harry Scott; Secretary-Treasurer, Lorne Hornsby; Executive Committee, Commades Dr. Don Holdcroft, Doug Hill; Gordon Haggerty and Ross Hart.

Branch 389 received their Charter on February 28, 1946. The following were the Charter Members: William Forsyth, D. Toms, Lorne Hornsby, Gordon Haggerty, Ross Hart, G. Young, R. E. Vilneff, Barnie Quinn, James Diaper, William Platt, C.W. Scott, Harry Revoy, F. McLaughlin, W. Althouse, Earl Hoffman, Oakley Peters, Dr. Don Hold-roft, Joe Cosgrove, Doug Hill and D. J. Johnson.

Branch 389 Growth

Having started with these 20 members, the work of Branch 389 continued. In 1972, Social members, who were sons and daughters of the Legion members, became Associate Members. Anyone else becoming involved became a Fraternal Member. In 1980, spouses could become Associate members. Also, in 1972, Militia Members became Ordinary Members

Members.
At the present time, there are 30 Life Members, 139 Ordinary Members, 124 Associate Members, 12 Honorary Members, and 82 Fraternal Members. So far, there have been 31 Presidents, the last one being an Associate Member, Sandy Peters. The present President, Bob Hand, is also the Deputy Zone Commander for Zone F-S. Zone Committee Officers include Bpb Gray, Don Shattraw, Mac McPhee, and Jack Adams. Both Gray and McPhee are also District Committee Members.

History of First Building

Royal Canadian Legion Branch 389 hall

Since the the initial meetings in the town hall, three meetings were held in the hotel. After again meeting at the chambers, it was decided to buy a building lot. Such a lot was purchased from Bill Forsyth for $300, located on Hwy 7 beside the Old Mission.

Hwy 7 beside the Old Mission.
In 1948 190 bonds were issued at ten dollars apiece. Street dances were also held to raise funds for a new building.

During those early years, Havelock was dry. This meant that the Legion had no licence to sell beer at 25 cents a bottle. One of the comrades obtained Social Licences to sell beer while bootlegging took place in the basement. In '1950 the branch was closed down for a month for bootlegging, but the wasn't too long before they were back in business. In 1957.

There were some outstanding debts, but the thrifty concerns of members managed to keep the building in branch ownership.

Time for a new building

Membership continued to grow, and in 1962 the thoughts began to arise that it was time to bell a new and bigger building. For one thing, the Ladies' Auxiliary definitely needed a new kitchen. The ladies' became involved in the Legion's work in 1951, when Cont'd on page 20-4.

Durward Mosher

During World War I, Durward "Dave" Mosher was a very determined young man.
Before the age of 16 he joined the 30th Infantry in the American Army. He had been told at Beebee, Quebec that he was "too young," so he just went across the border into Massachusetts and said he was 18. He joined in 1917, and was discharged from Camp Devons (now called Fort Devons)
when the war ended with about nine months and nine days of service.

He married the late Mary Lilley in 1929 in New York City, just "before the Depression." They had a family of nine children, two of whom are now deceased.

In Sherbrooke in June of 1940 Dave joined Regiment No. D46111 of the Sherbrooke Fusiliers. The regiment, combined with two others, were trained in the skills of infantry, machine gun, and handling armoured tanks. When Dave first joined his health was classified as "A-1." Then, in 1943, his classification was changed to 'C-2.' Having previously been stationed in points between Quebec City and St. John's, Newfoundland, he was then transferred to Montreal, where he did yard duty and anything else that was required.

anything else that was required.
A resident of Norwood since 1977, Dave has lived in Have-lock for the past three years. His occupation during his working years was that of a machinist. He is now 87 years old. A former member of Norwood Legion Branch 300, his membership is now trans-ferred to Havelock-Belmont Legion Branch 300.

Murray Hugh Fraser

Ninety-year old Murrary Hugh Fraser, who now lives at the Carewell Nursing Home in Campbellford, is a World War I veteran. Apart from army life, Murray has been a Belmont Twp. resident for most of his life, and in later years resided in Havelock village. He joined the army at 18 years of age in 1915, and he was No. 305894 in D Company. He received his early training at Barriefield, Ontario, at a camp located near Kingston.

However, shortly after departure, the vessel was ship-wrecked. The men were rescued in lifeboats and activated to Halifax After the wrecked. The men were rescued in lifeboats and returned to Halifax. After the ship was repaired, it set out again. This time the ship made it, and Murray found himself stationed in Hut No. 424 with the 18th Canadian Reserve Army at Seaford, Sussex, England.

Although Murray remained in military service until after the war ended, being the war ended, being discharged in July of 1919, he never was on the battlefield. He contacted the mumps, and He contacted the numps, and spent much time in convales-cent camp with this and other illness. He ended up being a guard with the military police, and escorted those unfortunates who had to face court.

Murray remembers well when Armistice Day was announced. The soldiers were playing cricket when the commander rode out and said, "Hostilities have ceased." Immediately, everyone was dismissed from duty for the day. It sure was a happy feeling, just like expressed by the song, "There'll be Bluebirds over the White Cliffs of Dover." Murray recalls that the cliffs were really exceptionally "white."

A former Havelock area man and friend, Jack Buchanan (No. 3058948), was in the same regiment.

nan (No. 305945), was in the same regiment.

Money was sometimes sent from home to the soldiers. It was sent to the London City and Midland Banks Ltd. at Threadneedle Street in London. Murray married Effie Dafoe in 1923, and the couple raised four daughters. Murray was employed in the ice business. That was before the time of electric refrigerators. Later he worked at farming.

Emma Variy

Emma Varty is a 92-year old World War I veteran, who enjoys living in Havelock, and is a member of Havelock-Belmont Legion Branch 389. She was a member of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps in England, having joined in early 1918 when she was 23 years old. Her work consisted of the peressary duties involved with necessary duties involved with maintaining hospitals and convalescent clinics for the returning wounded.

"I had been working before joining the army in an ammunition factory making shells and filling hand grenades," recalls Emma. However, she became "very sick" from the poison effect of a yellow powder that was used in their manufacture and was advised "to quit." In fact, everyone working in the plant was "as yellow as a lemon" and when Emma became ill as a result, her face swelled up so badly that her own father didn't recognize her.

her.

Having had previous experience as a domestic, she decided that rather than do housework she would use her skills in the war effort. The idea did not go over too well with her father who believed that "the army was no place for a lady." She did though, when on leave, and no more was said about the

She worked for the most part at an officers' command depot at Eastbourne looking after convalescent officers who had been wounded in France. She says that the work was hard, but "we had a lot of fun too." It was through the army that she met her Canadian husband, George Walter Varty, whose parents farmed at RR1 Havelock. She came back to Canada with him in 1919. with him in 1919.

with him in 1919.

Emma tried to get into the army again during World War II, but her age deterred her. Still she did her duty in Havelock at this time, filling in for the young men who had gone to war. She worked on a railway section, 'picking up debris, shovelling snow, all kinds of jobs."

Mighty Emma did what she could. And, she was only four feet tall!

Ninety-two year old Herb Hoard of Havelock is one of the four village remaining World War I veterans, and a member

Havelock Branch 389 community involvement

By Anna Kriedemann
Forty years of dedication, hard work, and perseverance have resulted in the ongoing work of Havelock-Belmont Legion Branch 389. The work of the branch, including both that of the men's division and the Ladies' Auxiliary, (the latter which has been going full force for the past 35 years), is more than marching with flags.

From the time of the construction of the old Legion construction of the old Legion building, sometime around 1946, until the sod turning for the beginning of a new building in June of 1974, and ever since, the area Legion members have been 'diligently involved in community involvement.

Eight-year old Katharine Angulo of Tumaco, Columbia, South America, is Branch 389's foster child. Past-President Sandy Peters was the Chair-

Katharine lives in a two-room house with her mother, father, a six-year old brother and a five-year old sister. Her father is a baker, and their monthly income is about $83.

The Branch receives correspondence from Katharine

Local Brownies, Guides, Cubs, and Scouts have received support from Branch 389. The Branch shares an

The structure of the Legion

In consideration of what the Legion can achieve, some understanding of how it works may prove helpful. In brief, the Act of Incorporation (Chapter 84 of the Statutes of Canada, 1948, as amended), is the authority for The Royal Canadian Legion. From this Act is drawn the General By-laws and from the by-laws is drawn the provincial command by-law and from the provincial command by-laws, the hranch by-laws. The primary unit is the branch. A number of Granches form a zone, a number of rones a district, and a number of incessarily so, form a provincial command.

The building also houses the staff of Legion Magazine. Standing committees are normally authorized by the Dominion Executive Council to which they report annually. These committees also report to the Sub-Executive Committee of Council on an as required basis. This may sound confusing, but in fact it works well and ensures the maintenance of the democratic principles on which the Legion was built. The Legion is a non-profit, dues-supported organization. It receives no financial support from outside agencies.

A per capita tax on dues paid by the members supports the operation of provincial and Dominion Commands. Payment of dues also entitles members to receive monthly issues of Legion Magazine. At the second meeting, 23 members were initiated. Today, there are 95 members of the Auxiliary.
The first venture to help the Branch was the selling of 30 books of tickets for their Annual Carnival Draw and looking after the refreshment booth, where they sold ice cream cones for five cents; pop for ten cents and hot dogs for fifteen cents.

Instead of sending delegates to Convention in Timmons, the Auxiliary had the linoleum floor covering installed in the kitchen.

In 1952, the ladies held a very successful Robin Hood Cooking School in the theatre and the Zone Commander was in atten-dance from Belleville.

In the beginning, the Auxiliary Provincial Conventions were held every year, then as they grew in size it was changed to every two years. In 1953, the Legion Branch members fought to get the Auxiliary into the same zone as they were (F2) and Helen Hazell was elected Deputy Zone Commander. The same year, the rules were changed deleting Deputy Zone Commanders.

In 1954, the Auxiliary started supplying hot chocolate and lunch for bands for the Santa Claus Parade and have bagged candy ever since. At that time,

In Flanders Fields the poppies grow Between the crosses, row on row, That mark our place, and in the sky The larks still bravely singing fly. Scarce heard amid the guns below. We are the Dead. Short days ago We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow, Loved and were loved, and now we lie In Flanders Fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe, To you from failing hands we throw The torch, be yours to hold it high, If ye break faith with us who die We shall not sleep, though poppies grow In Flanders Fields.

Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of earth And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wing Sunway I've climbed, and joined the tumbling mirth Of sun-split clouds-and done a hundred things and swung High in the sunlit silence. Hov'ring there I've chased the shouting wind along, and flung My eager craft through footless hall of air. Up, up the long, delirious, burning blue I've topped with windswept heights with easy grace Where never lark, or even eagle flew And, while with silent, lifting mind I've trod The high untrespassed sanctity of space Put out my hand, and touhed the face of God.

Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

The Royal Canadian Legion has evolved over the many years since its infant days as the Great War Veteran's Asso-ciation and, later, as The Brit-ish Empire Service League. It is a national organization that is very clearly, directly and proudly sustained by thou-sands of local branches – large and small – across Canada. of Legionism — a patriotic devotion to the nation and and a far-reaching sense of community — flourishes, as it always has, over the many stages of the history of war veterans and their families in this Friendly Town.

Wives, friends and members of the International Daughters of the Empire (£.O.D.E.) helped with renair work and furnishings.

This Peterborough Street headquarters was first heated with an old woodburning box stove. Later, this was eliminated and a furnace was installed. Meetings, banquets and card parties were held on the main floor and the bar and wash rooms were in the basement. In the winter the water had to be shut off every night so the pipes would not freeze. It is worth noting that the I.O.D.E.. so instrumental in assisting in preparing Branch 300's first real home, formed its first local chapter in 1913 with Mrs. Jesse Cuffe serving as its first Regent. #### Sports sponsorship

It was at this Peterborough Street Legion that sports was first started with Art Watkin as president and Charlie Drummond as sports officer. These two gentlemen and four other members - Morley Daynes, Claude Watson, Mel Hamblin and Joe McKey - travelled to Preston and returned home with their first provincial trophy. It was a cribbage trophy they would win three successive years and for this championship effort the trophy was given to Branch 300 to keep. It was at this Peterborough

"Our Soldier Boys" from The Friendly Town

The following essay is excepted from R.A Dean's sook "The Friendly Town;" is book unblished in 1962 in anticipation of the centennial of our country's confederation in 97. This passage is from a shapter called "Our Soldier Soys."

Although our people, from the very beginning, were a peace-loving people as witnessed by the fact that the earliest settlers had come from so many different races, English, Scotch, French and others, working closely in harmony in their common need, they were never-the-less, hostille to any attempt at invasion of the lands they had begun to think of as "home." It is recorded that as far back as 1838 a full Company was raised in this area under the Leadership of Colonel R. In 1898 a smaller group of our young men promptly voluntered for overseas service in the South African war and after a short bit of training were sent across the seas to take an active part in the hostilities while a second contingent was formed and in training if further assistance should be required. Fortunate-ly, that trouble came to an end-before this second group could leave our shores. So Far as I can learn, there

Pte. Hampton was first interred near the battle-filed in which he fell but was later removed from there to "The Garden of Remebrance" portion of a Cernetery some 570 miles from Cape Town, which is being cared for by local government authorities.

It was a difficult task for some time but things slowly improved and the returned soldier began to find a groove wherein he could once more become a part of his own community.

... When Adolf Hitler threw his challenge to the world, and his Nazi-hordes into the domain if his neighbours in 1939-40, our Canadian boys once again flocked to the colours for the protection of Home and Country. Local enlistmenst were prompt but not so many as in 1914 because of our greatly depleted population. Many of our young men had left the area during the depression years and when the call came, they enlisted from other points then too, our boys had the choice of three branches of service the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force. Right here it could be mentioned that several young chaps who were willing and anxious to enlist, were found to be physically unfit (according to the records) due to "mainutrition" and other physical defects brought about by the strenuous toil and privations of the "hungry Thirties."

Our Canadian soldiers served in every field of conflict as well as in the invasion of Normandy, always with honour to themselves and to their old home town. Those who were fortunate to return to us from time to time, carried the mark of battle by way of visible wounds or by the invisi-ble "hurt" to mind and body to the long nervous tension, the many narrow escapes, uncer-tain food and rest, as well as the many horrors that are encountered in ANY war.

The five-year-old team normally runs on a budget of about $25,000, Downey said.
This year, with a crisis looming, expenses were pared to the bone and the year's budget is around $18,000. Even with the cutbacks, the Hurricanes: are dangerously close to running in the red.

The major savings this year is in "hockey lifestyle," as Downey terms it, including all to outlit the boys to play. For example, it costs $90 and up for a padded girdle, and the team

There has been a similar inventory of all the other components, such as gloves and socks. This year, however, the parents of the boys have had to absorb an increased share of the cost by providing more of the needed equipment.

The Hurricanes are funded by the sale of lottery tickets and by gate receipts. About $12,000 is generated by the lottery, and $5,000 to $6,000 at the gate, depending in both cases on interest and support

This is really the first Remembrance Day I have paid any great attention to. I attended the service in Madoc at the Cenotaph and many thoughts came to mind.

Cenotaph and many thoughts came to mind.

As we are all aware. Remembrance Day is to honour those who fought and died for our freedom. Sometimes I wonder if a mistake hasn't been made. For I don't know that freedom is all that worth dying for; that is, the freedom that this country is that worth dying for; that is, the freedom that this county is allowing.

The homosexual cries for his freedom of expression and receives it. The pornographer cries for his freedom to exploit women and children and receives it. The schools and country have freely withdrawn God from their cirriculum and their homes, and we wonder why our young are so unruly. Women have the freedom to kill their unborn babies and who cares!

I know what these men died for in war: Life, God and Liberty! It seems we have let them die in vain, for the freedom we allow was not the freedom they died for.

I wonder if these courageous men aren't crying from their

I wonder if these courageous men aren't crying from their graves...don't remember us, remember what we died for.

Before the Name Goes On

Could you imagine Uniroyal using Michelin's name on their tires or Lee trying to pass themselves off as Calvin Klein jeans by using their name? Hopefully, it wouldn't be long before we realized we were being duped.

We take a lot on the name of a product. The name usually indicates the quality and often the price of the product. Teenagers have to have Calvin Klein jeans just because they are Calvin Klein jeans. People debate over which is the best cola. Coke or Pensi Calvin Klein jeans. People debate over which is the best cola. Coke or Pepsi.

Although some hardliners can tell the difference, most of us, without the name to go by, would be lost in picking the better-tasting cola. The name speaks multitudes.

I can't remember what product was being advertised, but I remember the slogan that was used: "The quality goes in before the name goes on". When you stop to think about it, that is really an effective slogan. As a matter of fact, it should be used with a word that gets thrown around quite frequently: Christian.

Just ask anyone if they consider themselves Christians. The normal response would be "yes". But, take two or three steps back and examine the quality of the person's life. Often the quality hasn't gone in before the name went on.

"Christian" is an interesting word. Its root word is "Christ". Its suffix is "ian". "Ian" indicates belonging, or adhering to Christian then, means one who belongs to Christ. In the book of Acts, this was its original meaning as the disciples of Christ at Antioch were first called Christians.

It is a shame that they didn't have copyright laws in those days. If there had been, the word Christian may have been kept pure from the adultery it has undergone. Today, people redefine the word to apply to all sorts of people, each with their own belief, but suffer so the Christians.

Our Glorious To Each. Sons His Own

by Jean Beatens

Let's praise the ones Our glorious sons ho went to war And returned no more; For they're the ones Our glorious sons

Who paid the price
Not once but twice.
Once for themselves the price

Secondly, for us, their lives were laid Beneath the crosses, row on Where are they now! I do not But we'll remember them forever more, And meet again at heavens

To thank the Ones Our glorious sons, Who went to war And returned no more by Jean Beatens We remember our own, the ones we lost Who laid their lives down, to Who laid their lives down, to cover the cost. But they've since become a part of many others. That left behind their wives, the sons and brothers. So while we remember one, we must remember them too. The Army, the Navy and the Airforce Blue; They fought together and won gave lus peace for evermore. For each one lost to us, one came home Remember them all - not just "to each his own".

To Hell and Back by Jean Beatens

To hell and back as on they marched Choked with dust, their throats They crouched beneath the shell torn sky Too scared to ask the reason why!
Tripping over others, as down
they fell Into craters, made by an exploding shell.
Among the sand-bagged trenches, deep they slid
As from the enemy fire, they stayed hid
Then on they surged, to hell
and back
Before night fell, and all was black.

The Village Farewell

by Jean Beatens

The bells throughout the village rang, And praying voices in the churches sang, As tanks and Armies marched to war Collecting men from door to door; Wives and mothers cried and waved And hoped that all of them be.

But later, just a few returned And then the fatal news was That the fight raged fierce and And many died in trenches, deep and muddy; But for all of those, who now remain
We'll sing their praises over

Now there is peace and the village sings
While joyfully the church bells ring. And we offer up our prayerful thanks To all those men who left in Taking with them husbands and sons
As wives and mothers waved, to their loved ones.

It's oul season around the area

by Marion Strebig
For the Federation of Ontario Naturalists
It's owl season. Already a snowy owl has reached Lestie Street Spit. Their color, the fact that they are diurnal, and their habit of perching on posts or rocks in open areas, make these owls highly visible.
But migratory owls. like the tiny saw-whet owl and the long-eared owl, are much more difficult to find. The sawwhet chooses a day-time perch in tangles and thickets. Recently, only the agitation of a flock of golden-crowned kinglets gave away the presence of a sawwhet owl perched in the middle of a hawthorn thicket, clutching a headless vole.

ing a headless vole.

Blue jays and crows delight Blue jays and crows delight in tormenting perching long-eared and great horned owls. If you hear a flock of crows raising a rumpus, follow the noise and you're likely to find a perching long-eared owl hugging the trunk of a large conifer.

Since owls are usually diffi-cult to see, they exercise the fascination of the unknown. fascination of the unknown.
Mainly nocturnal or at least crepuscular in habit, their silent flight and their rich haunting calls give them an aura of mystery.

Superstitious attachment to owls goes back to ancient times. In Greek mythology, Pallas Athena, goddess of war and wisdom was attended by an owl.

Their large, flattened heads, large eyes and facial discs give owls a disturbingly human appearance. Added to this is

November 20-

December 24

their uncanny ability to rotate the head with great speed in what appears to be a full circle. Actually, because their eyes are fixed in their sockets, owls must turn their heads in order to scan. To facilitate this, the owl has more neck vertebrae and neck muscula-ture than other birds. Owls like the snowy owl do

Owls like the snowy owl do not migrate. But some winters, northern owls move south of their normal range in search of food. These owls, unused to humans, appear tame and will permit close approach by humans.

Their efficiency as predators has given owls little to fear except from larger predators and, unfortunately, man. and, unfortunately, man. Despite its reputation for wisdom, an owl seldom makes the connection between human presence and danger.

Because owls rest for long periods on a favorite perch, they are sitting targets for harassment. Every winter, many owls are killed or crippled by gunshots.

Owls deserve better from human beings. They are the world's most efficient mousetrap. Since owls regurgitate the parts of the prey they cannot digest, there is ample evidence in the form of balls of fur and bones under any owl perch of its voracious appetite for rodents. Diseases of the respiratory system (including cancer) rank as the third leading cause of death among Canadians. Nearly 26,000 Canadians (9,200 in Onlario) die as a result of diseases of the respiratory system each year. Lung cancer will become the leading cause of cancer death for women. Breast cancer is currently in first position.

Asthma affects approximately one million Canadians. People with asthma usually have "twitchy" airways. Bronchial tubes react to stimuli such as cold air, exercise: allergens, irritating substances in the air such as tobacco smoke, drugs such as aspirin, and infections and colds.

Buried in garbage

by Marion Strebig

How many cans of garbage did you put out last garbage day? If you are participating in a community curbside blue box recycling program, you will have separated papers, cans and bottles from the rest of your garbage. If you compost kitchen garbage, green waste from the garden, and leaves, this will further reduce your garbage. In the past most of our garbage has been dumped into landfill sites. A relatively small portion has been incinerated. However, incinerators currently in use, because they burn whatever is in the garbage including large amounts of plastic, release toxic substances like chlorine and dioxin into the atmosphere. Also present landfill sites will soon be full.

But one element in our garbage has not been saisfactorily tackled. What are people to do with half-used containers of solvent, insecticides, or motor oil? Where do they dispose of things like batteries? In the past these things have often been dumped down the drain or been pitched out along the road. At the moment some municipalities set up hazardous waste depots from time to time where people may bring substances for separation and proper disposal at sites like Iricil. This is at best a band-aid solution to a difficult problem. And it will certainly get worse. Many countries in Europe are experimenting with innovative ideas for dealing with this sort of waste, In Sweden, for instance, you must return your old batteries before you may bay new ones. With landfill sites difficult to find, many municipalities have been ferced to look for ways te reduce garbage. A curbside recycling program is a good to do with half-used containers beginning, but what is really needed is to alter the way people think. For years we've used objects which were never meant to last. Those days are over; we are drowning in our own garbage, and poisoning ourselves at the same time.

Recycling week November 16-22 would be a good time to start a recycling program in your area if one does not already exist. The Waste Management Branch of Ontario's Ministry of the Environment offers technical and financial assistance programs to assist municipalities and fusinesses in the development of programs aimed at reducing garbage. Contact The Waste Management Branch at (416) 323-5200 for futher information. The Recycling Hotline offers information on recycling to callers anywhere in Outario at the toll-free number 1.506.337-5479.

Lest we forget: The Norwood Cenotaph is one of the finest in the area and it was here that members of Legion Branch 300, service club representatives, municipal politicans and young school children gathered to pay their deepest respect to the men who made the ultimate sacrifice. It was solemn, sedate and moving.

"Sleuth" receives rave reviews

Anthony Shaffer's "Sleuth", one of the Stirling Performing Arts Committee's three performances for it's 1987/88 adult theatre series, is receiving rave reviews in Toronto.

The mystery thriller, which recently opened at the New Century Theatre, on Danforth Avenue, in Toronto, features Patrick Macnee (of the long-running television series "The Avengers" fame) and Geraint Wyn Davies.

The masterful production revolves around the confrontation between Andrew Wyke, a Machiavelian master of old-fashioned mystery novels, (played by Macnee) and his wife's lover, Milo Tinadle (play-ed by Wyn Davies). The two opponents face off in a mind game that swiftly changes to a game of death being played by equals. The audience is kept enthralled until the entertain-ingly tricky conclusion.

The mystery thriller, which opened in 1970, has proven itself to be a consistent pleaser. Described as "bright, literate and humorous", the performance is taut and keeps the audience guessing until the

Tickets for the series are limited and anyone interested in purchasing one for the series are advised to do so before the deadline of November 24th, 1987. For ticket information contact either 395-2879 or 395-2242.

SANTA'S COMING TO TOWN

You better watch out. Santa Claus is coming to town and if you really love a parade, you can gatch Santa in each town across the county.

Santa's first stop is Cobourg on Saturday, Nov. 21. The parade starts at University and Dazey Streets at 2 p.m., and proceeds south to King and west to the five corners.

The theme, this year, is "Nursery Rhymes". A camera crew will be filming at "in Hall. So, if you want to hear all the bands playing and see all the batons twirling, that's the place to be.

A week later, on Saturday, Nov. 28, in Campbellford, "Christmas is for Kida" is the theme of this annual event. The parade starts at noon. Catch it on the bridge or at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets.

Port Hope celebrates Olde Tyme Christmas in December. So, it's not surprising that "An Olde Fashioned Christmas" is the theme for this parade. It starts at 1 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 5. The parade route follows Waiton Street from Bramley/Ridout to Queen Streets.

Next is Brighton's parade on December 12, at 2 p.m. The parade starts at the high school and winds its way along Dundas and Main Streets.

Santa winds up his tour in Wooler on Saturday, Dec. 19, at 8 p.m. The parade starts at the ball park and goes through the village.

Don't miss all these chances to get into a festive spirit.

If you have an event you would like publicized across the county, please contact: The Northumberland County Tourism Office, 566 William Street, Cobourg, Ont., KSA 3A5.

Nuclear accident

by Don Alexander Researcher for ACT and the Human Scale Institute Don Alexander is a graduate student at Trent University, student at Trent University, and spent the summer researching a brief for the government-sponsored Ontario Nuclear Safety Review (ONSR). At the ONSR workshop, set up to discuss nuclear safety, Don presented findings on behalf of ACT, a Toronto-based peace group, and the Human Scale Institute, an organization concerned with local development. Many other groups, pro and con, were represented at the commission's hearings.

The nuclear industry says it can't happen here - that the probabilities are just too low. But the Soviets said that, and so did Metropolitan Edison, the company that operated Three Mile Island.

What if the unthinkable were to occur at either the Pickering or (soon to be completed) Darlington Nuclear Generating Stations?

This summer I set out to find out the answers by studying Chernobyl and Three Mile Island, and comparing the Durham-Peterborough area

Durham-Peterborough area with the affected parts of Ukraine and Pennsylvania. The area I studied encompassed all of Durham Region, and major portions of Victoria, Peterborough and Northumberland Counties. The area is quite similar to Three Mile Island: semi-rural, with medium-sized cities and towns. Like part of Pennsylvania it has a strong industrial nia, it has a strong industrial base, and a diverse and productive agriculture.

Consequences could be like Chernobyl

Of the four sites (Pickering.
Darlington, Three Mile Island and Chernobyl), Pickering is the most developed. Within a 20-mile radius, Pickering has 2-3 million people. Three Mile Island has 600,000, Darlington has 300,000, and Chernobyl had about 150,000 about 150 000

about 150,000.
Were an accident similar to Chernobyl or Three Mile Island to occur, the consequences for communities near Pickering and Darlington could be as bad or worse.
How bad was it? At Chernobyl, 31 people died, mostly firefighters; 203 were severely injured. Estimates for the numbers of people who will ow develop fatal cancers range from 1500 to half a million. Fifty per cent more children in the local area will be born mentally retarded. Separation from loved ones, the damage to the environment and the loss of familiar homes-and occupations. Caused and occupations caused mental anguish for thousands mental anguish for thousands of people.

Altogether, nearly half a million people were evacuated, and some families remain separated to this day. Much of the land within the 30 kilometre zone cannot be used for agriculture, although some crops were harvested using specially sealed tractors.

The price tag for accident clean-up, evacuation, replacement power, lost agricultural production and health care will likely total $10 billion. This is similar to the figure Hydro derived for a major accident at the Pickering site, and their figure did not include on-site cleanup costs and replacement power.

Near the Chernobyl plant, the authorities had to build a Near the Chernobyl plant, the authorities had to build a 20-kilometre long embankment to try to prevent the Prypiat River from being contaminated. Kiev, a city of two and half million people, had to close its reservoir and develop new sources of water. Wells within a 30-kilometre radius were sealed, forests were cut down and entombed in concrete and plastic film spread over much of the land.

If a major accident occurred in Ontario, municipal water facilities would have to be closed, Lake Ontario might be contaminated as a source of drinking water for millions of Canadians, and the head waters of major streams and rivers located along the Pine Ridge would likely be affected by radiation.

Unfortunately, nuclear accidents don't stop at national boundaries Outside the Soviet dents don't stop at national boundaries. Outside the Soviet Union, one hundred million Europeans stopped eating certain foods, and close to half a billion dollars of lost produce and other economic costs were experienced with effects being felt as far away as Scotland and Wales.

At Three Mile Island, the

and Wales.

At Three Mile Island, the consequences were less dramatic. According to local residents, birds and many small mammals all but disappeared. Farm animals and pets died in unusually high-unbers, and exhibited arthritis, muscle deficiencies, reproduction and birthing problems. Some trees developed huge holes, become defoliated or had sap running off in the fall. A nuclear accident is too serious a prospect for Ontario Hydro to be playing a numbers game. Ontarions need to consider alternatives which could include renewable energy sources (including small-scale hydro), making houses, factories and office buildings smore energy efficient, putting scrubbers on coal plants, and plain doing more with less.

Ken Yarrow

Railroads are great and wondrous implements of commerce and trade only as long as they are functional and productive, but what happens when they become redundant? Initially, the weeds grow profusely and the rails become rusty and the process of rot continues in ties and bridges. But at a slightly faster pace than the rot, bureaucracy takes note and says, "Hey, we must do something." To and behold, eventually the railroad line gets officially closed and declared available to someone. Railroads are great and declared available to someone.

Now this is where it just starts to get interesting. (We will deal only with Huntingdon will deal only with Huntingdon spur line for now.) CNR gives first choice to the federal government, then to the province and next to the municipality. Well, this approximately 14 miles of line finally got down to Huntingdon Township Council, and at the present time, they have made an offer to purchase the line in an offer to purchase the line in its entirety.

its entirety.

To back up just slightly, the price was $100 per acre. Looks simple, doesn't it? Not so, believe me. In its meandering trip through the township, it passes through or touches on ninety-odd private parcels of land. A few years ago, council had passed a motion to the effect that the railroad return all unused property to the.

effect that the railroad return all unused property to the adjoining landowners. In addition, Hastings Feder-action of Agriculture had been promoting the same thing, wishing to help protect farmers from any further disruption of their enterprises. As it became known that the property was available at the township level, ideas for its disposal became almost as numerous as adjoining landowners.

disposal became almost as numerous as adjoining landowners.
Council eventually decided that in order to best serve and protect its ratepayers, it would purchase the property and at least ensure that it would rall into speculative hands or whatever else.
Some of the suggestions being kicked around for a use for the rail line are: an open nature trail for the use of anyone and everyone, a restricted trail only to be used by hikers, a trail for horses and people only, a wide-open trail for whatever could navigate the humps, bumps and waterfilled holes.

Removal of a section north any section of Highway 62 may for the rail line are: an open be necessary for safety. Sharp drop-offs could precipitate motorized vehicles taking a serious fall and winding up in the middle of the highway.

One entrepreneur wishes to have a section removed to provide a better view and improved aesthetics. Some feel the lake is one of our major assets and would be better displayed with portions of the railroad bed gone. Others want railroad bed gone. Others want it left in for a sound barrier.

Some say the motorized vehicles which use the line as a connecting link between High-way 62 and the 12th concession are a threat to life and limb.

are a threat to life and limb.
Others say they don't understand this viewpoint. We have farmers who definitely want to own the portions cutting through their operations.

Huntingdon' Council has caused a questionnaire to be circulated among the adjoining property owners and has taken these replies into consideration. As they say in all the good books, council in its wisdom (or whatever) has publicly asked for input from the rest of Huntingdon taxpayers.

taxpayers.
So, if you have a unique idea that hasn't already been that hasn't already been mentioned here, or if you have strong views or questions, please contact the township office prior to Dec. 7.
Twould indeed be nice if the railroad had kept running another 50 years.

The Mahatma Gandhi Story

As I talk with people, many have excuses or reasons for not accepting Christ as their Savior. Many look to past experiences or point to their beliefs as reasons for shunning the gospel. If you are like this you are not alone. This is the story of Mahatma Gandhi. You may have studied him in school, read about him, or Gandhi. You may have studied him in school, read about him, or seen the motion picture concerning him.

Mahatma Gandhi was born in India. No one knew that he was destined to become a great world leader. His childhood certainly didn't point to it. He was not exceptionally bright but he was devout in his religious pursuits in Hinduism. Later, he was to travel to London, England to study for a career in law. After graduating from law school, he returned to India, but due to an overbundance of lawyers, he was left no choice but to take employment in a South African law firm.

Although a pacifist, Gandhi led a campaign for free rights for the Indians in South Africa. With limited success he returned to India to lead an active life in Indian politics. After a lengthy political career Gandhi's life was taken. His assasination ended a brilliant life contributions of the contribution of th

Gandhi failed to take the last step and embrace Christianity as his personal belief. He liked its ideas but realized it claimed to be exclusive in its knowledge of God and salvation. Gandhi, being a Hindu, believed in many gods and could not bring himself to believe in one God.

In November, when the clouds are lowering and the wind is swirling sudden showers of wet snow about, flocks of small stim ducks fly low and fast just above the surface of the lake. For a moment the sun breaks through the cloud cover and shines bright on the brilliant white and black plumage of the males. As they fly, a melodious ululation, a repetitive ow-owly, comes from the flock.

rarely silent, is a sexist slur. It is the male who is the vocalist. The male in his spectacular white and dark winter plumage is an arresting sight. His long dandyish tall feathers, cocked up as he rides the waves, give him a jaunty air. In the spring in his nuptial plumage, his white nape, neck and breast change to a deep rich brown, nearly black on the upper surfaces, with a light patch around the eye.

The females are neat and rather nondescript, with infinite variations in their brown and white plumage. So unpre-dictable is the spring plumage of the females that even seasoned birdwatchers some-times study a particularly oddly patterned female thinking they have found some strange new wanderer.

These little ducks are great entertainers. They dive like the grebes and loons, going deep for food and staying under water for fairly long periods. They do not seem particular in their food, eating a wide variety of molluses.

periods. They do not seem particular in their food, eating a wide variety of molluscs, aquatic insects and vegetation. When they are not diving, the flock keeps up a constant chatter. As the days lengthen in February, the rich, musical notes of the males carry across the water. Once heard the sound is unforgettable. With each syllable, the male throws his head back so that the call has a vibrant resonance.

Late in May, when the calling has reached a high pitch, small flocks begin to head north to their nesting grounds near inland ponds on the tundra. After all that talk the male leaves the female to incubate the eggs. Nesting here is a hazardous business. There are many nest robbers like skuas, glaucous guils and foxes. When they hatch, the day-old chicks must follow the mother on the dangerous journey to the near-est water. dangerous journey to the near-est water.

The new Atlas of Breeding Birds of Ontario notes that oldsquaw are uncommon nesters in Ontario, on the coast of Hudson Bay near the Manitoba border. This repre-sents the most southerly extent of their nesting range.

This means that those of us who live near the Great Lakes are fortunate. For the next five or six months we will have many opportunities to study these lively little ducks.

Tim Williams, a grade 13 student at Centre Hastings Secondary School, will carry the Olympic Torch on Dec. 21 in the Omemee area. Tim is modest about the honor he has received, but says his parents, who live in Thomasburg, are really excited. He will run about five kilometres.

Vankoughnet to speak in Madoc

By Bill Vankoughnet, M.P.

On Dec. 10, 1987, the Hastngs County Federation of griculture is hosting a Free Frade Night at the Kiwanis Jentre in Madoc at 7:30 p.m. It is a very important topic and hose interested should take advantage of this information neeting. I hope to see you here.

I must admit the free trade leal is not the perfect mutual ree access document many and hoped for. However it is, as the famous actor/singer faurice Chevalier responded when asked how he felt about getting old, "fantastic by comparison with all the available alternatives." For Canadians, with over 30 able alternatives".

For Canadians, with over 30 per cent of our G.N.P. devoted to trade, increasing global protectionism is totally contrary to our economic and social well-being. As the rivality of the contrading blocks of the United States, Japan, and the European Economic Community, we must view with alarm the damaging consequences to ourselves of orchestrated restrictions to trade.
The most important sources of threat to the Canadian of threat to the Canadian conomy over the foreseeable future is the extent of protectionist sentiment which is evident in the United States. That sentiment, in turn, is an expression of fear — fear by American producers of hundreds of products, that they can't compete with Canadian firms. That fear, in many asses justified by on-going loss of sales to foreign countries such as Canada, motivates American producers to put pressure on their congressmen and their senators to stop the influx of foreign products. The collective result has been the createst tide of protectionist egislation that the United States has ever produced.

The American political system is very sensitive to lobby and special interest groups. This means that it provides many points at which producers can exert political pressure. The House of Representatives, the Senate and the Administration are all avenues of political influence for American producers who are being hurt by foreign trade competition. The U.S. omnibus trade bill, which this process has produced, is the most protectionist document since the Smoot-Hawley tariff of the 1930's which devastated world trade at that time.

One of the most significant victims of this political pressure and the legislation it has caused would be Canada. Our F.T.A. (free trade agreement) provides us with the possibility of protection from that process. It is highly unlikely that the trade deal will completely insulate Canada from all of the political pressure which frightened American producers will bring to bear. However, this F.T.A. will ensure that there are extra safeguards through which American firms seeking protection from Canadian products will have to jump in order to get the shelter they seek. Most importantly, the process will be depoliticized in two ways.

First of all, the very existence of a non-political forum to which trade items can be bought for adjudication as to the facts means that there will be greater separation from political pressure. Although operating in the political milieu, like all governmental institutions the process of adjudication will itself be technicial and not political and comprise a bi-national staff process.

Secondly, the very fact that there is an extra series of steps in the path of protectionism means that it is to that degree depoliticized. The House of Representatives is elected every two years in the U.S., and simply increasing the time between when a firm or group of firms seeks protection and when a trade barrier can be imposed, makes it less politically attractive.

cally attractive.

The reason politicians are protectionist is because it is politically profitable in terms of support from sometimes, powerful companies and individuals. The Canadian or American consumer does not benefit from protection. In the short term goods become more expensive due to tariffs, whereas in the long term competition is healther and gives consumers better quality and a variety to choose from. If the protectionist process is made lengthy, and it is less possible for individual politicians to take credit for the protectionist legislation they sponsor or support, there will be less interest in this process. It is because politicians can be seen to deliver trade protection that they are vulnerable to this sort of pressure. This suggest a slogan that may capture the essence of the agreement's effect, namely "Protection postponed is discontinual continual cont denied".

Understanding the political chemistry of protectionism is also crucial to appropriately interpreting American reaction. The trade deal must be sold in the United States in a way that it need not be sold in our country. The Prime Minister has the power with Parliament to simply pen the deal if he so wishes. In the United States, the President can propose but Congress must approve the deal.

In order to get this approval, he will have to demonstrate that the deal is in the interest of the United States as well as Canada. In the protectionist currently prevailing, that will be no mean feat and it will take some of the most exaggerated claims as to how the U.S. will benefit. Canadians should not lose sight of this fact when they are appraising media coverage of the event south of the border.

Literacy Association seeks tutors

By Corry Wink

Most Canadians believe that we have a very modern and well educated society. We do not expect to learn about a problem of illiteracy in Cana-da. However, recent surveys by various news services indi-cate that as much as 20 per cent of the population has difficulty with reading and writing.

The lack of literacy skills The lack of literacy skills affects almost every area of a person's life. It limits the kinds of jobs he can do. It affects a person's ability to cope with his mail and the note from his children's schools Illiterate people cannot read menus in restaurants or advertisments in stores or street signs

Vulnerable and dependent

Hilterate people devise many ways to cope with their disability. They often avoid situations where reading is required When they are forced into a situation where something must be read they ask someone for help, saying that they, forgot their glasses. The inability to read makes a person very dependent on others and very vulnerable. Though illuteracy exists at Illiterate people devise

Though illiteracy exists at all levels of society, many hide their disability so well that even their friends don't know about it.

Illiteracy is a greater handicap in our society today than ever before. There are very few jobs that do not require some reading skills. Our bills come in the mail and our prescriptions come with writ-ten instructions. We all need to be able to read and write to

Registered Assistive Devices

by Doreen Sharpe
The More Abled Than Disabled Club met on Monday,
October 26th for an informative and social night.
Doreen Sharpe, Registered
Assistive Devices Program
(A.D.P.) authorizer, gave an informative talk on A.D.P.
which is funded by the Ontario Ministry of Health.
This portion of A.D.P. is intended to assist in obtaining devices required to augment as persons mobility. It will ald people who have illnesses and or permanent disability, or permanent disability, requiring the use of such equipment for a period greater than six months.

Under the general category of wheelchairs are standard, manual, power chairs, scoo-ters, hand-driven bicycles and cushions.

Mobility devices include specialized canes, crutches, walkers and specialized strollers (for children over 24 months, unless the child requires a seating insert).

Clients are eligible for more than one device from the mobility device category, if medically necessary (i.e. - a walker and crutches). Two mobility aids of the same type are not eligible (i.e. - two walkers).

People are eligible for both a wheelchair and mobility aid(s). A.D.P. will generally contribute 75 per cent towards the purchase of one wheelchair or mobility aid every three years, or one ultra lite every five years with varying conditions.

If you feel you require mobility aid(s) equipment see your Doctor. He will fill out the A.D.P. authorization form and verify that you have an illness and/or has a functional disability. You will then sign the

ity. You will then sign the release of information statement.

The physician will then referyou to a health professional who is a registered authorizer with the A.D.P.

She will assess your needs for equipment, taking into consideration the home and community conditions, activities and lifestyles, as well as the individual preferences. The equipment will be specified in section II of the form, indicating brand, model number, and A.D.P. catalogue number. The authorizer will then provide an estimate cost.

A copy is then taken to a registered vendor of the clients choice. In this area, the equipment is often phone ordered choice. In this area, the equipment is often phone ordered from a medical supplier in Peterborough and the equipment is delivered. Upon receiving the mobility device, the client will, then normally pay the vendor 25 per cent of the cost.

This is an exciting new program, which will hopefully improve the quality of life for many.

many.

It was also mentioned at the meeting that with more scoomeeting that with more scot-ters and wheelchairs being used in Campbellford, hopeful-ly sidewalks and curbs will be improved to accessible safe levels. Until these are improved they will remain obstacles.

obstacles.

Cars parking in driveways across sidewalks are another obstacle. Users of scooters and wheelchairs, who need sidewalks are often unable to meet their destination or do so dangerously, driving around the car if able.

the car if able.

The parking authority in town was contacted, and informed of the situation. He assured us that offenders will be ticketed. It was agreed that most people probably do not realize the obstacle they create by such parking, and it is hoped if it is brought to their attention the situation will be corrected.

attention the situation will be corrected.

The More Abled Than Disabled Club will soon be starting work on the Ontario March of Dimes campaign, which kicks off in January. There are stacks and stacks of papers to be stapled, folded and stuffed in envelopes and we need help! Anyone who would like to assist, we need you.please call Doreen Sharpe, Campaign Chairman, 653-4066.

The More Abled Than Disab-led will be having their Christ-mas Party on Monday, Decem-ber 7th at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Care Centre, Front Street North, Campbellford. Don't be shy

WHITE RODGERS ELECTRONIC AIR CLEANER Reg. Price $670.00
X-MAS Special Price $570.00 installed Save $100.00.

A total home comfort package needs more than just the benefits of heating and cooling. Ever-increasing pollution makes it vitally important to have an effective way to clean the air in the home. And the new White-Rodgers can do the job while consuming no more electricity than a 40 watt light bulb. Tests conducted at Emerson Air's test laboratory prove the amazing thoroughness of the Electronic Air Cleaner in cleansing the air we breathe. Its compact, highly efficient cell removes lint, dust, pollen, cigarette and cooking smoke. So effective it removes 90 to 99 per cent of all pollen and larger pollutants from the air. And 75% of pollutants as small as .01 microns on a single pass through the cleaner. That includes particles even smaller than cigarette or cooking smoke. With performance like this, no wonder more people insist on White-Rodgers electronic air cleaners as a "must" in their total home comfort package.
